Great Britain Again Votes Not to Enter Spanish War

Non-Intervention Policy Backed Over Protest of Liberals, Labor.

Program Attacked By Lloyd George

Conciliatory Moves Made to France and Reich by Commons.

The Situation Abroad.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden warned that Britain wants peace, "but not peace at any price," as the British government reaffirmed its policy on non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

British officials made conciliatory gestures toward Germany and France by praising German "restraint" following alleged attacks on German ships by Spanish loyalists, and by announcing a billion-dollar increase in the British exchange equalization fund to bolster the French financial situation.

A member of the Italian Fascist Grand Council advised Italy to break off relations with Britain and France and warned that Italians are ready for war.

Non-Intervention Backed.

London, June 25.—Over sharp Liberal and Labor criticism, the British government today reaffirmed its policy of nonintervention in the Spanish civil war.

An all-day debate in the House of Commons emphasized the keen anxiety of Premier Neville Chamberlain and his colleagues to ameliorate the crisis that has arisen from the German and Italian withdrawal from the international naval patrol.

Seek Reich Harmony.

France, intensely excited over the aftermath of the alleged torpedoing of the German cruiser Leipzig, is hardly likely to view with approval Chamberlain's reference to German "restraint." But the British premier skillfully coupled this gesture to Berlin with an offer of constructive assistance to France to help tide that nation over its present serious financial crisis. Today's historic debate in Parliament was chosen as the occasion for announcing a billion-dollar increase in the British exchange equalization fund. This provides indirect support for the hard-pressed franc until the Chautemps government can announce its fiscal and monetary policy after Georges Bonnet's return to Paris early next week.

I arrived in London this morning after a circuit of six European capitals which has amply revealed the nervous tension dominant on this side of the Atlantic. This trip gave sharp point to today's debate on British foreign policy, to which I listened for five hours. While the government gave the opposition every opportunity to present its viewpoint, both Chamberlain and Anthony Eden, the foreign secretary, left no doubt they intend to preserve harmonious relations with Germany unless provocation goes beyond the point so far reached.

Follow Different Lines.

Labor and Liberal speakers, led by Clement Attlee and David Lloyd George, respectively, concentrated on the argument that nonintervention operates to the detriment of the Valencia government alone and has now become farcical. Lloyd George in a particularly brilliant speech attacked Chamberlain's plea of "let's try to keep cool heads."

"Courage as well as coolness," said Lloyd George, "is essential to

Under the shade of an old tree at the Jefferson Island retreat, Congressmen yesterday talked informally with President Roosevelt. While it was reported to be a big "jollification," those returning brought back the word that the President said "We're going through on the court bill and other major proposals. Above are Representatives R. P. Hill and Jack Nichols, with Secretary McIntyre, talking with "the chief."

Roosevelt Is Grilled for Admission to Order of 'Demagogues.'

By Robert C. Albright.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, June 25.—The Jefferson Island concordat of at least temporary Democratic peace was figuratively drawn today in a setting of good fellowship, feasting and song on a tiny fleck in the Chesapeake about 15 miles from this historic capital.

Weary but happy Democratic pilgrims straggled back to the mainland tonight with first tidings of a day of fishing, swimming and good clean fun in the company of their President, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

No treaties were signed, no contracts sealed, and in the words of Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, "Nobody got religion." But a convivial basis was laid for what some party leaders hope will be a beautiful party friendship.

Members returned to Washington last night with no notion of when Congress will adjourn, no promise of court bill postponement and no visibly altered opinions. But some members vouchsafed that Mr. Roosevelt probably "got some votes." Progressive Democrats gleaned one pledge from the President—that he intends to "go through" with his entire program.

"There is no change in the legislative program," Senate Majority Leader Robinson announced as he docked. "It's just the same now as it was before."

Highlight of the day was initiation of President Roosevelt into the well-known Congressional "Demagogues Club," conducted with great unction by playful Representative

Harriman Bank's 17 Directors Agree To Pay $900,000

A $900,000 compromise settlement with 17 directors of the closed Harriman National Bank of New York was announced late yesterday by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

Together with settlements previously agreed upon with three other directors, amounting to $126,731, the compromise announced yesterday brings to $1,026,731 the sums salvaged by the Government from the wreck of the big bank.

The Harriman Bank closed March 3, 1933, with gross liabilities of approximately $25,000,000.

In its announcement, the Treasury said:

"Including the sums realized from settlements with the clearing house banks heretofore made, the depositors who have consented to said settlements will receive substantially 100 cents on the dollar."

Isle in Bay Found Surrounded By Secret Service and Navy

(Pictures Page 12.)

By Sidney Olson.

Chesapeake Bay, June 25.—Jefferson Island is a small body of land completely surrounded by the Secret Service.

It is also completely surrounded by the United States Navy, the Coast Guard, seaweed and several floating bottles.

None of the bottles we examined contained any messages, but it was also clearly evident that they had at no time contained potato salad.

Jefferson Island is a very undersling island, divided into three parts. Two of these three parts are uninhabited, but the third part, as we saw it yesterday, teemed with life.

On the wharf we found a man in a white suit and officer's hat, who politely suggested that we try the fishing grounds near Annapolis, 15 miles back up the bay.

"I hear the fishing is very good up there today," he said, flexing a right hand the size of a cow's haunch, and then resting it significantly on a bulging hip pocket.

"Come to think of it now, that's what we hear, too," we said.

At this point there was but one sight on Jefferson Island, the vision

'Scandal' Seen In Tax Agents' Resignations

Private Job List Sought; Roosevelt Asks $50,000 for 'Dodging' Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Congressional Tax Committee, said yesterday resignation of Internal Revenue agents to handle private tax cases was "almost a scandal."

Commissioner Guy T. Helvering has agreed to give the Senate-House investigators a list of employes who have left the Internal Revenue Bureau for that reason.

During the day President Roosevelt recommended in a letter to Speaker Bankhead that Congress appropriate $50,000 for expenses of the committee investigating tax evasion and avoidance.

The money would remain available until June 30, 1938, for salaries and other expenses of any persons the committee might employ.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, calling the turnover of bureau employes "one of the real problems in the struggle of the Government to collect its taxes," asked for the list of resigned agents yesterday.

Many employes, he said, remain in the bureau until they are "pretty well equipped" on tax law, procedure and technicalities, and then resign to obtain remunerative positions.

Doughton and Representative Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, expressed doubt the list would be of much value in helping Congress stop the practice.

Present statutes, Cooper said, forbid individuals to practice tax law before the Treasury within two

'Bloody Harlan' Judge Ousts Another Deputy

Officer Is Placed Under Peace Bond Following Alleged Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., June 25.—County Judge Morris Saylor demanded the resignation of another Harlan County deputy sheriff today as he continued his "purge" of armed officers who figured in testimony at the Senate Civil Liberties Committee's recent inquiry into Harlan County labor conditions.

The judge, who announced he would rid ranks of deputy sheriffs "of all men who have caused trouble" called for the resignation of Deputy Frank White following a peace bond action in county court.

Judge Saylor set for tomorrow the examining trial of two men accused of the "ride" murder of former Deputy Sheriff Wash Irvin, who was under protection of a Senate subpena when he was shot.

In jail on murder warrants were Perry Noe, one of three deputies dismissed yesterday, and Allen Bowlin, who resigned as a deputy.

Judge Saylor said his "cleanup" of deputies, who were denounced as "gun thugs" in the pay of coal operators by United Mine Workers of America witnesses at the Senate inquiry, was begun on his own initiative and was not prompted by Senate disclosures. He remarked the slaying of Irvin "might have" been

D. C. Transit Draws Volley Of Criticism

1-Man Trolley, Crowded Buses Assailed at Fare Increase Hearing.

Mallets to Smash Car Windows Urged; House Group Recesses.

Testimony yesterday at the hearing on request of Capital Transit Co. for an increase in District token fares dealt more with what numerous individuals and organizations think about the bus and street car service they get than about what they are willing to pay for it.

The Public Utilities Commission heard that many persons consider the one-man street car a safety menace, that crosstown travel is a long-drawn-out proposition marked by many transfers and much backtracking, that crowded buses are a nuisance, that transit vehicles should carry wooden mallets so that passengers could beat out the windows in case of a wreck, and that it is unfortunate everybody wants to come down town in the morning at the same time.

Lost All Her Buttons.

Mrs. H. M. Dickerson, of the Woodridge section, a member of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, told the commission she once boarded a street car so jammed with passengers that "every button on my coat was torn out by the roots."

"You might say that I should have waited for the next car, but a person does not do that when he is in a hurry and the next car is probably 20 minutes away," she said.

Louis A Day, of the Inter-Federation Council of Prince Georges County, Alexandria, Montgomery County and the District, said the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor recently adopted a resolution asking that one-man street cars be banned.

W. Y. Boyd, of the Petworth Citizens Association, expressed the view the District needs more buses and that the rules governing the number of persons on a bus should be strictly enforced.

H. M. Fulton, representing the Thomas Circle Citizens Association, said any increase in fare would cause whole sections to lose their street-car service—because it would bring about a great decrease in street-car travel.

Favor Present Fare.

George A. Corbin, of the Manor Park Citizens Association expressed the belief that any increase in the 10-cent bus fare would cause persons in that area to use their automobiles for downtown travel.

Corbin said he had no objection to the transit company paying a dividend.

Morning witnesses, representing colored civic organizations, devoted most of their attention to protests that service to their communities is inadequate. Woolsey W. Hall, president of the colored federation, said that since institution of the Takoma bus line the need has arisen for service providing stops at U street.

Lieut. Col. Howard D. Queen, of the Army Reserve Corps, urged the need of better service for communities in the far Northeast section.

Opposition of the Federation of Business Men's Associations to increase in fare was voiced by Theodore S. Grape.

Meanwhile, a sub-committee of the House District Committee investigating operations of the transit company took a recess until after July 4 after a two-day inquiry.

William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, was the principal witness yesterday. Amid clashes with officials of the transit company he recited the history of the one-man car case which he contested before the Public Utilities Commission.

Tuxedos Is Order Of Paul McNutt For Scribe Diners

Manila, P. I., June 25 (U.P.).—Paul V. McNutt, Philippine high commissioner, said today that newspaper reporters and photographers must wear tuxedos to the banquet to be given tonight by McNutt in honor of Sergio Osmena, vice president of the Commonwealth government.

The formal dress order, which precipitated a flurry in Filipino newspaper circles, was described by the Manila Herald as "instructions number three," in the consular regulations issued by McNutt.

Mills in Youngstown Open Quietly Despite C.I.O. 'Massacre' Fear

Girdler Declines Roosevelt Help as Steel Strike Arbiter

Republic Asks Aid of U. S. Army in Ohio Labor Controversy; Scorns Efforts of Federal Mediation Board.

By William V. Nessly.

Tom Girdler, embattled chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, yesterday flatly refused to leave settlement of the seven-State steel strike to President Roosevelt as arbiter. At the same time his company suggested in Federal District Court here that Federal troops be pressed into service, if the Committee for Industrial Organization "has power to control the postal system."

The corporation filed a demurrer to Postmaster General Farley's answer to Republic's suit seeking to compel the Postoffice Department to accept mailed packages of food for non-strikers still inside the company's plants. The demurrer said:

"If it be the shameful fact that the C. I. O. has grown to such proportions that it has power to control the postal system of the Federal Government, then the time has indeed come to invoke the aid of the Government's military forces."

Girdler, holding a press conference before departing by plane for Cleveland, said, without elaboration as to his reasons, that he would not agree to the suggestion by Philip Murray, strike chieftain, that President Roosevelt be the arbiter of the strike.

He criticized the Mediation Board as "prejudiced and incompetent" and declared he would reserve the

Companies Reject Man-to-Man Talks

Roosevelt Intervention Asked by Organizers, Still Defiant.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 25.—Gates of steel mills in the Mahoning Valley swung open to nonstrikers tonight, and company officials estimated several thousand hurried back to work in a move unmarked by disturbances.

John Owens, C. I. O. Ohio organizer, disputed the statement many workers returned.

"They (the steel companies) just shifted some men around," he said.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Republic Steel Corporation resumed operations in their Youngstown plants.

Ohio National Guardsmen and city police guarded the entrance and egress of workers as the 7 o'clock whistle blew for change of shifts.

Strikes in New Phase.

Thus the Great Lakes steel strikes, which have made 100,000 idle in seven States, entered another phase of the dispute between the C. I. O. and four independent companies over refusal of the latter to sign labor contracts.

The mills were ordered reopened after the collapse of Federal mediation efforts in Cleveland, and an announcement by Adjt. Gen. Emil Marx, of Ohio, that the troops would stand by to see that order was preserved for those who wanted to go to work.

Gov. Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, ordered troops into Youngstown Tuesday morning when Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube had announced they would reopen the plants.

Frantic appeals by C. I. O. leaders that there would be bloodshed if the move were carried out were sent to the Governor, and he dispatched troops instructed to see that the plants remained closed in "status quo" until the mediation board concluded its deliberations one way or the other.

Three Firms Refuse Parley.

The mediators stood by in Cleveland tonight, but three of the four affected companies—Republic, Inland Steel and Sheet & Tube—had rejected their final offer for a "man-to-man" conference to settle the strike.

Bethlehem Steel, the fourth company, had not replied.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube officials estimated a third of its 15,000 employes reported for work; Republic executives said 2,500 employes returned.

These figures were disputed by Owens. He estimated the number of men in the mills today at 1,000.

Cleaners Face Strike Paralysis At Peak Season

Over 400 Out in Drive Against 11 Laundry, Pressing Firms.

With the July Fourth week-end—a holiday period that normally brings peak business to the laundry and cleaning industry—just a few days off, Washington faced last night a general shut-down of plants throughout the city.

More than 400 workers, including inside employes and drivers, were reported on strike against 11 establishments as officials of Local 187, Laundry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers, called a mass meeting in Murray Casino on U street northwest.

It was voted at a meeting to throw a mass picket line around the Howard plant on South Capitol street this morning. Strike leaders charged Howard's with attempts to form a company union and accepting work from closed shops.

Ask Recognition.

A strike situation, paralyzing the whole industry in the District of Columbia, was rapidly developing yesterday as the list of picketed plants grew from three to twelve. Calvin Cousens, president of the laundry workers union, said last night he was not sure that all of the plants where walkouts had been called were reported to his headquarters at 717 Florida avenue northwest.

The strikers in all cases are asking for recognition of their union, for higher wages and more favorable hours. Cousens said that all owners affected had been presented with agreements, setting forth the union demands.

Unionists said last night they had received no response from the owners. In one plant, however, a threatened walk-out yesterday morning was called off when the management offered workers wage increases.

Conditions Described.

A general complaint was made by strikers to the National Labor Relations Board over refusal of plant owners to negotiate. It was understood the plant owners had agreed among themselves not to make individual agreements during efforts of the committee which they elected Thursday night.

Strikers pointed out that most of the proposed agreements sent to

Wagner Assails Firms Blocking Rights of Labor

Proposals for Betterment Being Undermined, He Charges.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Senator Robert Wagner (Democrat), New York, tonight charged "a few large corporations" with "fighting labor and labor's right to organize. * * * fighting every enlightened employer, fighting every enlightened employer, * * * and undermining all the proposals for economic betterment for which the national labor relations act would serve as a foundation."

"Any large and powerful corporation which declares openly that it will not bargain with any union, which proudly boasts that it will not sign contracts even when their terms are not in dispute, is serving notice upon the whole world that it will not obey the law," the labor act's sponsor said in a speech prepared for a radio broadcast.

"* * * While labor has * * * responsibilities, as a practical matter it can abide by them only where industry is willing to do likewise.

"No poor laboring man, engaged in a struggle for his very livelihood, can afford to wait patiently during two or three years, while a rich corporation uses all its legal and extra-legal resources to evade and defeat the law. * * *

"The evidence is clear beyond a doubt that a very few large corporations, who fought the national labor relations act before it was passed, who fought it after it was passed but before it was declared constitutional by the Supreme Court, are now by every method at their disposal fighting the law after it has been upheld by the highest court in the land.

"We must realize * * * that this unyielding minority are not only fighting labor and labor's right to organize. They are fighting every enlightened employer—hundreds of large ones and the hundreds of thousands of small ones—who have gladly accepted the methods of peace and co-operation.

"They are undermining all the proposals of economic betterment for which the national labor relations act would serve as a foundation—proposals such as the pending wage and hour bill, with its prohibition of child labor and the sweat shop and its guarantee of more stable prosperity for business."

Stalin's Kiss Greets Returning Leader of North Polar Party

Moscow, June 25.—Joseph Stalin, the man of steel, apparently yielded to impulse today when he greeted heavily-bearded Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, homecoming leader of the Soviet Union's successful North Pole expedition, with a kiss full on the lips.

The kissing was not confined to Stalin and the chief of the band of heroes from the North Pole. Klementi E. Voroshiloff, commissar of war, Premier V. M. Molotoff and other government leaders exchanged embraces and kisses with several members of the expedition besides Schmidt.

This was the climax of a spectacular welcome by the nation's leaders for the 31 men who last month flew to the North Pole, landed there and established an observation base for the Soviet Union at the top of the world.

The homecoming went off like a well-timed theatrical performance. The expedition, flying nonstop from distant Archangel, was due at 5 p. m. Just at that hour the four planes, three huge 24-ton craft and a smaller pathfinding plane, appeared.

Ten minutes earlier Stalin, riding alone in a big American-made car and followed by two cars of guards,

Powell Gets 135-Year Term for 27 Robberies; 'Menace to Society,' Asserts Arlington Judge

D. A. Powell, 29, Arlington burglar, was given sentences totaling 135 years on 27 robbery counts yesterday by Judge Walter T. McCarthy in Arlington Circuit Court.

Powell was arrested May 24 at the home of Margaret V. Payne, 4803 North Washington boulevard, Ballston, Va., after raids on Arlington homes continuing since last February.

The sentences were all for the minimum term, on 26 counts of housebreaking and 1 of grand larceny. They represent the longest single jail term ever given a prisoner in Arlington County.

When first indicted by the grand jury last Monday, Powell pleaded not guilty to all counts, and his attorney, George B. Robie, asked for a change of venue. In court yesterday attempts to plead guilty on two or three counts only were stopped short after objection of Lawrence W. Douglas, Commonwealth's attorney. Powell finally pleaded guilty to all the charges.

In imposing the sentence, Judge McCarthy said:

"The actions of this man have been such that he should be kept locked up until some definite indication is given that he should be liberated. When the time comes that it is thought he should be let loose, it would have to be proved that he was cured of his present tendencies and no longer a menace to society. When that happens I should be glad to see him again on the streets."

Police said the total loot recovered amounted to almost $8,000 worth of jewelry, silverware, clothing and radios. Several shotguns and two pistols were found among the stolen property.

Powell was caught when he jumped off the porch roof of the Payne residence and landed in the

Arkansas Firm To Buy Surplus Power of TVA

Lack of Rate Restrictions in Contract Draws Rankin's Fire.

By Russell Smith

Approval of a five-year contract with the Arkansas Power & Light Co. for sale of surplus Federal power to the company at wholesale was announced yesterday by Washington offices of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The contract is the second signed this month by the TVA, following months when its expansion had been delayed during court proceedings brought by private utilities. The previous contract signed June 18, however, was with a municipality, the City of Chattanooga.

The Arkansas contract's lack of restrictions upon the power company, as to rates it charges, brought a vigorous protest from Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Wants "Yardstick."

"Unless this power is resold at the yardstick rates, this will be the last contract of its kind ever made by the TVA with a private power company, if I can have my way, and a majority of the membership of the House feel just as I do about it," he said. "We are not going to permit the power trust to destroy the TVA yardstick.

"There has been a great deal of ballyhoo in the newspapers about the way electric light and power rates have been reduced in Arkansas, but as a matter of fact, Arkansas has the second highest rates of any State in the Union."

In its statement, the TVA said that "with the beginning of this new source of supply (of power) the company has indicated its intention of reducing rates in the State of Arkansas."

The TVA estimated that, from the fifth year on, the contract would yield $750,000 annually.

Under the contract sale of power will begin in the autumn, upon completion of a 154,000-volt transmission line now being constructed between Pickwick Landing Dam, on the Tennessee River, and Memphis.

To Serve Memphis Also.

"This line is of sufficient capacity to fulfill the requirements of both the City of Memphis, which the authority is under contract to serve, and the Arkansas Power & Light Co. under the terms of the contract just executed," said the TVA.

As to the rates at which the power is to be sold to the company, the TVA said:

"The rates for firm power are the regular TVA wholesale rates at which power is sold to municipalities and co-operatives. Rates for interruptible and run-of-stream secondary power are the regular TVA rates for this class of service."

Provision is made for sale the first year of 10,000 kilowatts of interruptible power, power guaranteed for 300 days to be selected by TVA out of each year. Run-of-stream flow permits, and firm power, the third class covered by the contract, is continuous.

The total power sold increases to 30,000 kilowatts the second year, and to 40,000 the next three years.

If the contract should continue after five years, it will call for sale of 35,000 kilowatts of firm and 5,000 of run-of-stream power. The contract, which must be approved by the Federal Power Commission and the Arkansas Public Utilities Commission, is renewed automatically after the fifth year unless it is terminated by either the TVA or the company upon 2½ years' notice.

Brazil Seeks to Renew External Debt Decree

New York, June 25 (AP).—Preliminary conversations on renewal of the Brazilian debt decree, issued early in 1934, will begin within the next few days between J. Reuben Clark, president of the foreign bondholders protective council, and Valentin Boucas, who is a member of the Brazilian financial mission now in the United States.

Of $450,000,000 in original national, state and municipal issues of Brazilian dollar bonds, there is a round $370,000,000 outstanding, in partial default. Only on a funding loan of $29,000,000 issued in 1931 after the default of the national issues, has there been full service.

Gold and silver exports were negligible.

Politics and People

Long-Range Objectives of Van Zeeland and Roosevelt Are Similar but Procedure Differs.

By Franklyn Waltman

Not the smallest amount of President Roosevelt's pleasure in greeting Prime Minister Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium was due to the fact his distinguished guest has been heralded throughout this country and western Europe as the Belgian "New Dealer." And, indeed, the two-year regime of Dr. Van Zeeland has been, in many respects, similar to the American New Deal.

WALTMAN.

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and it is human nature to like those who do as we do. How much direct influence the first two years of the Roosevelt Administration had on Dr. Van Zeeland is not known. But the Belgian premier is known as a great admirer of things American and ever since his Princeton days has closely watched developments in this country.

The long-range objectives of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Van Zeeland are substantially the same: to preserve the democratic system against the spreading totalitarian system of government, on the one hand, and against communism and extreme radicalism, on the other, by preserving world peace and improving the plight of the worst of the down-trodden.

Though similar in objectives and in form, the American and Belgian New Deals are much different in the methods pursued. Fundamentally, substantially the same situation confronted Dr. Van Zeeland when he came into power in March, 1935, as faced President Roosevelt two years earlier. Although proceeding in the same direction, the two men did so differently.

Dr. Van Zeeland, by training and profession an economist and not a politician, set as his goal the achievement, first, of economic recovery or rehabilitation, and then reform or social progress. President Roosevelt—little familiar with economics but well-versed in politics—after the first month of his Administration intertwined measures for recovery with those for reform until each impeded the other.

The Van Zeeland regime, moreover, has been marked by two attributes: Caution and conservatism in financial matters; audacity and boldness in steps toward social progress. The Roosevelt Administration, on the other hand, has been bold and audacious—if not reckless—in the financial field and, from a long-range viewpoint, hesitating and erratic in the sphere of social progress.

Much in the way of social progress has been claimed for the Roosevelt Administration, but when the balance sheet is tallied, not a great deal has been done. Social security is the outstanding achievement and, in all probability, it will remain as the greatest monument to Franklin D. Roosevelt. Yet the existing program is woefully inadequate and defective, and badly needs an overhauling.

It is true that aspects of the NRA were a distinct and desirable contribution to social progress, but they were intertwined with obnoxious undertakings and the whole program—undoubtedly because too much was attempted—suffered from maladministration. The Supreme Court killed NRA, but public opinion already had turned against it. Two years were permitted to elapse before the Administration undertook to revive the desirable features of NRA, such as abolition of child labor and minimum wages.

In the field of housing, a part of the social program, the New Deal has its worst score. In that endeavor for four years the Administration has fiddled and stewed, first going off on one Utopian adventure and then another—without anything substantial being accomplished. Meanwhile, Senator Robert F. Wagner has struggled on, buffeted about as though he had to fight a Tory Administration. What has been done about farm tenancy? In the field of labor relations collective bargaining has been established—or has it?

But there is no need to labor the point or make further side excursions to demonstrate that in the field of social progress the New Deal—despite its claims and some accomplishments—has been hesitating and erratic. This thesis is devoted to comparing the American and Belgian New Deals.

The proof of any pudding is in the eating and the results achieved in this country and Belgium cast light on the wisdom of the two methods. Belgium has a balanced budget and has repealed certain taxes levied during the emergency. Belgium unemployment has been reduced to negligible volume—indeed, not many more than the aged and incompetent are in need of jobs.

In the United States the Treasury is, in the fifth year of recovery, approaching the end of a fiscal year with a deficit close to $3,000,000,000. Congress is now putting the finishing touches to a bill extending our nuisance or crisis taxes for another two years. The unemployed continue to number 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 and the Federal Government for another year finds it necessary to provide $1,500,000,000 to relieve the jobless. In view of the mighty natural resources of this country, compared with those of tiny Belgium, it certainly appears the latter country is now in better shape.

Much is made, when the similiarities of the Roosevelt and Van Zeeland administrations are recounted, of the fact that the Belgian Premier's first act was to close the Stock Exchange, suspend the gold standard and devalue the belga by 23 per cent—just as the President closed the banks, abandoned gold and later on devalued the dollar to 59.06 per cent of its former value.

But in this connection it is important to note that the Belgian action came two years later and that Belgium was fighting with its back to the wall against devastating withdrawals of gold, in a world which already had made the maintenance of the status quo in monetary matters impossible. The United States had not the same provocation—nor did Dr. Van Zeeland prolong the agony, as was done here.

There is no record that the Princeton-educated Van Zeeland followed the advice of any poultry experts in the monetary field, such as Prof. Warren, or that he ever adventured on such a senseless undertaking as the American silver purchase program. In appraising him, it is a significant and revealing fact that he was one of the students of Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, the Princeton monetary expert, and now regards him so highly that this week he conferred on his former professor a decoration as "Officer of the Crown." And let it be remembered that in the early years of the American New Deal Dr. Kemmerer's advice was anathema to the Administration and its brain trust.

None of this is intended to be critical of the Roosevelt Administration. This recital is made solely to demonstrate that contentions of the identical nature of the Roosevelt and Van Zeeland New Deals should be taken with a grain of salt and read with a distinguishing eye. Possibly President Roosevelt could not have accomplished more, even had his fiscal policies been more conservative. The two countries involved are not analogous and neither are their social and economic fabrics.

Moreover, Dr. Van Zeeland had the advantage of witnessing the Roosevelt errors. But he is more than a follower of the New Deal. He had the intelligence and understanding to copy the virtues of the Roosevelt Administration and to shun its vices. And that is the reason he is going on to greater things while the ministry of Leon Blum—who was not so discriminating—has fallen in France.

Phone Operators' Region Pay Raise To Total $250,000

Telephone operators in the Chesapeake & Potomac system, approximately 1,800 in number, in the Washington metropolitan area, will be given pay raises totaling $250,000 a year, it was announced yesterday.

The new scale has not yet been worked out, C. & P. officials said, but it was said it would affect operators in the District, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia.

More operators are now employed than were at work before the dials were installed. At the same time a new peak has been reached in telephone installations. The number of telephones in Washington last month was 220,000, as compared with 206,000 a year ago and 159,000 in 1930.

PWA Revokes Order Limiting Relief Grants

$700,000,000 Program Gets Under Way; 2,648 Projects Approved.

The PWA order which had limited grants by that agency to little more than the money paid workers taken from relief rolls for projects was revoked yesterday by Assistant Administrator Horatio B. Hackett as PWA proceeded with plans for a two-year program that will entail some $700,000,000 of work.

The order, opposed by numerous groups in Congress, had limited PWA grants to 115 per cent of the relief labor pay rolls. It was figured that the limitation was restricting PWA contributions to only 10 or 11 per cent of the cost of projects, whereas the maximum previously had been 45 per cent, the figure to which it reverted yesterday after revocation of the order issued April 24.

Very few allotments had been made under the restriction just ended. PWA circles pointed out that housing, building of large structures and similar projects required a relatively high percentage of skilled workers, and comparatively few skilled workers are on the relief rolls.

It was understood President Roosevelt had agreed with Congressional leaders the relief-labor limitation should be rescinded, at the time Congressional groups were endeavoring to earmark portions of the new $1,500,000,000 relief fund for specific purposes. One group, led by Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, sought valiantly to award PWA an additional $300,000,000.

The relief bill, now in conference, provides for continuation of PWA for two years more and authorizes use of the $300,000,000 in its revolving fund. The Senate bill provides special consideration for projects on which special bond elections have been held by communities, and for replacement of schools and other public structures in hazardous condition.

It was revealed at PWA headquarters yesterday the agency's experts have approved 2,648 projects calling for PWA loans of $145,000,000 and grants of $377,000,000. All of them cannot be financed with the $300,000,000 available, but officials estimated a program involving total costs of from $700,000,000 to $800,000,000 would be possible.

Kennedy to Offer Measure to Limit Landlords' Profits

Legislation to limit profits of landlords to 7 per cent is being considered by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, he disclosed yesterday.

Just what form the legislation will take is uncertain, as Kennedy has not started drafting it. He said, however, it will be introduced next week and will take precedence over another measure he is preparing to reform the District government.

Pig Alley to Vanish For New Houses

The Alley Dwelling Authority yesterday accepted the bid of Walter B. Avery, of Washington, for construction of 16 group one-family, two-story houses on K street, between Sixth and Seventh streets southwest. The houses will face on a grass plot, shaded with trees, open to K street.

This project will eliminate Pig alley, one of the inhabited alleys in the Southwest.

The low bid was $83,125. With alternates accepted, this bid was reduced to $82,255, or $1,028 per room. There were six bidders. The high bid was $92,400.

This is the Alley Dwelling Authority's fourth low-rent housing project completed or under contract.

Three District Bills Deferred by House

House leaders yesterday deprived the District of another day, and Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, of his first chance to be in charge of local legislation as full chairman of the District Committee.

Explaining that national legislation should have precedence, the House leaders shunted aside three District bills on the calendar. The measures seek to establish a real estate commission, regulate barber shops and empower the Public Utilities Commission to limit the number of taxicabs in operation.

years after they have given up departmental jobs. But they still can use the knowledge they have gained with the Treasury, he added, and let a partner handle actual dealings with the department.

Fish repeated his demand for an investigation of the income tax returns of President Roosevelt, members of his family, Secretary Morgenthau, Postmaster General Farley and R. F. C. Chairman Jesse H. Jones.

New York Sun Explains.

New York, June 25 (AP).—The New York Sun today published a statement which read, in part:

"The Treasury Department yesterday publicly listed the New York Sun, Inc., as a personal holding company used for the avoidance of taxation by Mr. and Mrs. William T. Dewart. Mr. Dewart is the president and publisher of the Sun. * * *

"The New York Sun Inc., was incorporated at Albany October 16, 1926, with 30,000 shares of preferred (orA) stock, 20,000 shares of second preferred (or B) stock, all of the par value of $100 a share, and 100,000 shares of common stock of no par value. * * *

"The employes of the Sun were permitted to buy the preferred (or A) stock. This preferred stock then bore, and still bears, 8 per cent interest. This 8 per cent interest has been paid annually ever since to the holders of the preferred."

"This 8 per cent preferred (or A) stock is held by approximately 350 employes of the Sun.

"Neither the second preferred nor the common ever has paid a dividend.

"These salient facts, including the financial setup of the New York Sun, Inc., were printed in the newspaper at the time the company was incorporated and were reprinted in a widely circulated book, 'The Story of the Sun,' published in 1928, a copy of which the Treasury Department undoubtedly can obtain in the Library of Congres. * * *"

Loss of Maine, Vermont Still Puzzles Farley

Postmaster General Visits Annapolis Office on Way to Islands.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 25.—Postmaster General James A. Farley said today he still did not understand why Maine, with Vermont, voted against the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Stopping at the local postoffice, en route to the Democratic Conference on Jefferson Island, he said he had just returned from Maine and New Hampshire.

"I went up to Maine to see what happened," he said. "I didn't find out."

Farley, accompanied by William H. Bray, his secretary, and Smith W. Purdum, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, was received by Postmaster William A. Strohm, and citizens. It was the first time a Postmaster General visited the local postoffice.

Farley and Purdum were taken on a tour of the postoffice by Strohm. Farley shook hands with employes.

A youthful mailman coming out of the sunshine into the office interior blinked when the Postmaster General stretched out his hand and said:

"Young man, I am Jim Farley, how are you?"

Extortion Plot Suspect Taken By U. S. Agents

District Widow and Son Ordered to Pay $1,000 or Face Death.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation investigating a plot to extort $1,000 from Mrs. Henry G. Hanford, widow of a Washington businessman, arrested Earle William Gott, 22-year-old transient. He was held in bond of $10,000 after pleading guilty before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Gott, Federal officers said, admitted he alone engineered the plot against Mrs. Hanford and her son, S. J. Hanford.

A note demanding money was received by Mrs. Hanford Monday at her home, 3706 Military road northwest. It was signed "Mr. X," and threatened death to both the mother and son if orders were not met.

Instructions Given.

Postmarked Washington, June 19, the note warned Mrs. Hanford she was being "constantly watched" by three members of a "gang." She was told to obtain $1,000 in unmarked bills, wrap them in a small package and at 6 p. m. Wednesday deliver the money to the doorman of a downtown hotel. She was to instruct the doorman to hold the package until called for.

If she was willing to comply with the instructions, Mrs. Hanford was told to insert an ad in a morning paper.

Instead of carrying out instructions, Mrs. Hanford notified the Department of Justice. Special agents were assigned immediately to the case. The ad was inserted and a dummy "pay-off" package was delivered to the hotel doorman.

Suspect Tripped.

Shortly after 7 p. m. Wednesday—while the special agents watched—a man approached the doorman, held a brief conversation and took the package. The man, later identified as Gott, was arrested a few moments later.

He was taken to F. B. I. headquarters for questioning and subsequently signed a confession, authorities said.

Commissioner Turnage set the high bond to assure Gott's presence when needed.

Mrs. Hanford's husband was at one time assistant auditor of the Evening Star.

Miss Pickford Makes 11th-Hour Switch in Wedding Costumes

'America's Sweetheart,' Now 43, and Buddy Rogers Marry Today and Sail on Honolulu Honeymoon.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, June 25.—Exercising a woman's privilege, Mary Pickford changed her mind tonight about her entire costume for her wedding tomorrow to Charles (Buddy) Rogers in an informal garden.

Instead of "ice blue" crepe, she will wear ciel bleu (sky blue) crepe. Her hat will be modern Empire felt, rather than the halo type. Instead of blue to match her dress, her gloves will be "lie de vin (dregs of wine) to match her hat. The dress, hat and jacket carry out the Empire motif.

She gave no reason for the change.

Her wedding to "Buddy," handsome, 34-year-old Olathe (Kans.) boy, climaxes a romance they denied for two years. Miss Pickford is 43.

This will be her third marriage. It is Rogers' first.

The ceremony will be performed at 3 p. m. (6 p. m. Eastern standard time) in the garden at the home of Louis D. Leighton, a film producer. Fourteen persons, not including the Rev. James Hamilton Lash, will witness it. They are mostly relatives.

Following the ceremony, a large reception has been scheduled for Pickfair, Miss Pickford's magnificent Hilltop home. After the reception, the bride and bridegroom will sail for a Honolulu honeymoon.

connected with the Washington investigation.

Saylor said that so far 10 or 12 deputies have resigned or been dismissed and that he expected to dismiss others. The judge said he was unable to say how many deputies Harlan County now has.

Union organizers told the Senate committee that efforts to organize Harlan County in the past 15 years had been crushed with dynamitings, beatings and bullets by "gun thugs" who were identified as special deputies sheriff. Sheriff Theodore Middleton told the committee he had commissioned 300 such deputies since 1934.

Organizers Made Police.

Judge Saylor declined to say whether there was any significance to his appointment yesterday of two union organizers as county patrolmen.

County Attorney Pro Tem. George R. Pope said he expected to obtain additional warrants in the Irvin slaying following the hearing tomorrow. He declared the killing was "a carefully conceived plan by men experienced in that work."

A woman listed as Sally Smith, 19, was held as a material witness in the death of Irvin.

Irvin was named in testimony submitted to the Senate committee as one of three deputies who shot and left for dead another deputy. Irvin testified briefly at Washington, saying he had been in the pay of a coal company.

Catholics Broke Pact, German Press Charges

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 25.—The Nazi-controlled press tonight declared the Catholic Church has violated the Reich-Vatican concordat, and Catholics interpreted the dispatches as a new indication the days of the pact are numbered.

The official German news agency reported Joseph Buerckel, Nazi district leader for the Saar Basin and one of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's most trusted lieutenants, charged Ludwig Sebastian, Catholic Bishop of Speyer, violated the concordat.

Buerckel, the agency said, charged the bishop broke the pact by reporting to Rome matters having nothing to do with church affairs, and that the Vatican violated it by not calling him to order.

Buerckel conducted the Nazi campaign in the 1935 plebiscite in which the Saar Basin voted to return to Germany. The charge by so prominent a Nazi led informed persons to express belief the Reich, which already has withdrawn its representative from the Vatican, may soon declare the concordat no longer exists, having been broken "by the other side."

The occasion for Buerckel's charges was relatively unimportant. An elderly priest named Joseph Schroeder was fined for slandering Buerckel, who took this opportunity to cross-question the bishop on the witness stand.

The news agency said the bishop denied writing George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, who recently attacked Nazi immorality trials of priests and termed Hitler a "paperhanger." Then Buerckel was quoted as asking:

"Did you write a letter to Rome to the effect that the Stahlhelm (steel-helmet militia now banned) was forbidden in the Saar region and the SA (storm troops) were massed in a forest near Saarbruecken because the Stahlhelm planned a putsch?"

The bishop's reply was quoted as: "I can't say. I don't believe, though, that I wrote that." Buerckel showed then what was described as a photostatic copy of the letter written to Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, April 15, 1935.

Buerckel then said:

"The concordat was concluded by the state under the self-evident assumption that correspondence between the Vatican and bishops was accorded immunity solely for the protection of the bishop's pastoral functions. Now that it has become evident today that his protection of pastoral functions has been misused by the bishops and the Vatican, for the bishop himself admitted his letter was not reprimanded in any way by the Vatican, then I must here assert that high representatives of the church broke the concordat from the beginning."

Protestant Leader Seized.

Roosevelt Scouts Third-Term Idea, Wagner Asserts

New York, June 25 (AP).—The New York Evening Journal said today it had been informed by Senator Robert F. Wagner that President Roosevelt will not seek a third term.

"The President told me so himself just after Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania made the third term suggestion," the Journal quoted Senator Wagner as saying.

The paper said it reached Wagner at the wedding of his niece, Miss Evelyn Wagner, at the estate of former Mayor James J. Walker, at Northport, Long Island.

Wagner said the President informed him in speaking of Earle's statement:

"That is one precedent I won't break."

Polish Archbishop Assailed by 30,000

Warsaw, Poland, June 25 (AP).—Thirty thousand war veterans marched the streets tonight with signs reading "Archbishop of Krakow should be sent to a concentration camp" because he ordered the body of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski transferred from its Krakow Cathedral crypt to a nearby bell tower.

Catholic spokesmen explained the body was transferred because the crypt was too damp and too small for visitors, not as first reported because King Carol, head of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, planned to visit the tomb next week.

D. C. Police Block Virginia Couple's Marriage Plans

Love's young dream came to an unromantic climax last night as a Virginia farmer and his bride-to-be were taken back to Elyksville, Va., by Sheriff E. C. McCray, wh hoad been sent by the girl's father to get them.

The couple were arrested a minute before they planned to apply for a District marriage license and spent yesterday in jail awaiting the sheriff's arrival with a warrant, believed to have been sworn out by the girl's parent.

The girl is pretty, brown-eyed Lallie Virginia Bollinger, 18, of Columbia, Va. The man is Ernest Roy Richardson, of Island, Va., who looks much younger than his 37 years. Early yesterday they made the four-hour trip to Washington.

Police took the girl to the Women's Bureau, where authorities said she burst into tears every time reporters asked for an interview. Richardson was taken to the Fifth Precinct Station. Police last night were awaiting Sheriff E. C. McCray, of Elkshill, Va.

$10,000 Ecstasy At Cult Meeting Is Laid to Hunt

Threw Money on Floor, Witness at Seduction Trial Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 25.—Portly John Wuest Hunt, accused of seducing a 17-year-old girl by persuading her she was to be the "Virgin Mary" to a new "redeemer," once threw $10,000 on the floor in religious ecstasy and watched others scramble for it, a co-defendant, H. B. Smith, 67, testified today at their Mann act trial.

Smith, a retired engineer who, like Hunt, became a Father Divine votary, said the scene was at Hunt's Beverly Hills home. There 17-year-old Delight Jewett, of Denver, charges Hunt betrayed her last December.

The money flinging occurred at an exuberant cult meeting last fall which caused Lionel Barrymore and other film colony neighbors of Hunt to file peace disturbance charges.

"Hunt was talking," Smith testified. "He put his hand in his pocket and happened to find $10,000 there.

"He was in such a state of religious emotion that he threw it on the floor.

"Everybody started falling on the floor and calling Hunt 'Lord' and 'Shiloh.'"

Mrs. Elizabeth Peters, "Peaceful Martha" to Father Divine's followers, testified earlier.

Some 200 persons created a scene of wild disorder today by shoving their way into the courtroom before court convened The demonstration followed the statement of Hunt's colored attorney, Hugh Macbeth, that Father Divine might fly here to Hunt's defense—and that when Hunt takes the stand Tuesday his testimony will "raise the roof."

Mrs. Peters said that while she, the other defendants and Miss Jewett were at a Colorado Springs hotel en route to California, Hunt said "all the characteristics of the Virgin Mary were exemplified in the girl."

Wild Life Aid Bill Offered in Senate

By the Associated Press.

The House Select Committee on Conservation of Wild Life considered yesterday a proposal to earmark for wild life conservation work revenue from excise taxes on sporting arms and ammunitions. The bill has been offered in the Senate by Senator Pittman.

The funds, approximating $3,000,000, would be allotted to the States, 50 per cent on the basis of area and 50 per cent on the basis of number of hunting licenses issued, with the requirement that the States match the allotment.

State Department Help Sought for Couple in Spain

Louisville, Ky., June 25 (AP).—Aid of the Department of State in getting his daughter and her husband out of war-torn Spain, where they were reported held for questioning in an espionage round-up, was asked tonight by William M. Culter, of Louisville.

Culter sent his message to R. Walton Moore, Sssistant Secretary of State, after reading reports his daughter Lois, 20, and her husband, Charles Orr, 29, had been arrested at Barcelona and taken to Valencia for questioning.

Orr, who married Miss Culter last year while she was a sophomore at the University of Louisville, where he had taught economics, has been doing radio work for the Spanish government since October.

Woman Gets $80,000 For Spurned Love

Frankfort, Ky., June 25 (AP).—A romance which began on University of Tennessee campus 21 years ago culminated in an $80,000 heartbalm award today in the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Miss Evelyn Hazen, 37, of Knoxville, Tenn., won $65,000 compensatory and $15,000 exemplary damages in her breach-of-promise suit against Ralph P. Scharringhaus, 40, formerly of Erlanger, Ky.

British Character Actor Scored First Hit in 'Journey's End.'

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, June 25.—Colin Clive, 37, distinguished English actor who earned half a million dollars portraying characters the public wouldn't like, died in a hospital here today of pulmonary disorders.

Clive, who had been in the hospital several days, never fully recovered from an attack of pneumonia last year.

The Englishman, husband of Jeanne de Casalis, French star now in London, started his stage career in 1919, when a broken knee prevented him from carrying on studies in England to earn a commission in the British army and follow the footsteps of his father, Col. Colin Clive-Grieg.

His greatest prominence came from military roles on the stage. His most praised stage role was that of Capt. Stanhope, in "Journey's End," which he played in London. Later he enacted the same role on the screen.

His success was sensational on the British and American stages, and likewise success greeted him in the films. He was the star in "Frankenstein," "Clive of India," "The Man Who Broke the Bank of Monte Carlo," and numerous others.

Clive was born January 20, 1900, at St. Malo, France. Funeral arrangements are not complete.

Today's Sermon

By the Rev. Robert L. Wood, Pastor, Petworth M. E. Church.

Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief. Mark 9:24.

This is ever our cry. For none of us is so secure in his faith that even in the moment of its strength he does not cry out at the all too probable weakness of it.

Our faith is strong when we sit in our comfortable pew on Sunday; it is very weak when we face the temptations life brings during the week. We believe genuinely in God when we sing His praise in a service of worship; it is not so easy to keep this high mood when struggling with the problems brought by the working days. God is very near in the hours of faith; He is not nearly so real when we meet the testing of sickness, pain and sorrow. We are very sure about spiritual realities when we kneel to receive the symbols of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus Christ, but we are not nearly so certain when out in the ruck of the material things gone mad.

Today we may be very definite in the experience of our faith. But experience also tells us that before the echoes of our confident boast of assurance have died away we may be crying for help lest we lose our hold upon God altogether. For some of us the cry of faith must too often be: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief."

Thank God for that cry. For when my load overwhelms my faith; when the way is so dark that I cannot find my path; when I cannot understand my pain; when my sorrow-numbed senses refuse longer to struggle with the eternal problem of "Why?" then I can lift my voice to plead for my weakened faith. I may not always understand; my faith may not always be equal to the demands made upon it; but I can always voice my determination to believe, and lift my cry for help in maintaining that purpose. "Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief."

Strike Leaders Fear 'Massacre,' Wire Roosevelt

C. I. O. Defiant as Steel Plants Prepare to Reopen on Wide Front.

and said he did not believe it had increased tonight.

"Our people are not going back to work," he said. "The steel workers in this valley are not going back into those plants without a contract."

Pickets Inspect Autos.

Pickets peered into incoming automobiles, but made no effort to disturb the occupants.

Amid the heightening crisis, C. I. O. leaders in Youngstown appealed to President Roosevelt to intervene to prevent a "massacre."

The telegram, signed by officers of the Campbell C. I. O. Lodge of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., declared:

"Once agan we appeal to you in these critical days we are living through.

Urges Intervention.

"Within the next 12 hours, all these forces will be used in a concentrated attack on strikers. These armed forces are now meeting with company, county and city officials in preparation for a massacre."

The message besought the President "to intervene in order to work out a wage agreement in line with the recommendations of the Steel Mediation Board."

The two-State move to reopen the mills, climaxing the apparent collapse of peace efforts by President Roosevelt's Federal mediators, drew other bitter protests from C. I. O. leaders and threats of combating the attempted reopening with heavy picket reinforcements.

On the other hand, Gov. Martin L. Davey's office in Columbus reported receipt of nearly 1,000 telegrams congratulating him for ordering the Ohio National Guard to protect those workers who wished to return to the mills.

Seek Protest to Davey.

Union lieutenants at Cincinnati called on the White House to stop the use of troops for steel plant protection. They also asked 2,000 C. I. O. leaders to meet in Columbus tomorrow to protest to Gov. Davey.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. George H. Earle lifted martial law at Johnstown, and black smoke belched from Bethlehem Steel's huge Cambria works for the first time since the plant was shut down by State executive order last Sunday. About 235 State police stood guard around the steel works tonight.

Large Numbers Affected.

The concerted Ohio-Pennsylvania "go ahead" orders, foreshadowing a possible break in the 30-day-old strike deadlock, went out to steel workers in the following numbers:

Ohio—

Mahoning Valley—30,000 men, including about 20,000 in Youngstown and 10,000 in Warren and Niles.

Canton-Massilon—6,000 men.

Pennsylvania—

Johnstown—15,000 men, employed at Bethlehem's Cambria works.

Not all of these men have been idle, and not all of them, C. I. O. leaders said, would heed the call to set the wheels of industry in motion without meeting John L. Lewis' strike-supported demand for signed labor contracts.

C. I. O. leaders, facing an imminent showdown in the dispute which has cost 12 lives, set 100,000 men idle in the Great Lakes region and inflicted losses estimated as high as $20,000,000 in wages and production stoppage, fired angry protests to President Roosevelt against the use of troops to reopen the plants.

"Immoral Use of Troops."

One of the messages assailed "the immoral and unwarranted use of the National Guardsmen" in Ohio, and asserted:

"Gov. Davey is neglecting his duty as a public official. National Guardsmen are brutally attempting to break the strike. They are not protecting the rights of organized labor.

"Mr. President, we implore you to call the National Guardsmen off the strikers. Have them protect the status quo instead of attempting the reopening of the striking steel plants."

At a glance, the situation tonight appeared as follows:

1. At Youngstown, Ohio—Two major steel companies, Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube, announced reopening of plants for two-shift operations at 7 o'clock tonight.

John Owens, Ohio C. I. O. strike leader, immediately ordered strikers to "hold their ground" and refuse to go back to the mills.

"We are going to continue striking," he said.

2. At Johnstown, Pa.—Pickets withdrew, at least temporarily, from the closed Cambria works, after nearly 3,000 coal miners and steel strikers had massed at the gates at 7 a. m., when martial law was lifted.

A predicted march of 30,000 miners to support the strikers dwindled to a few thousand, police said. Union leaders estimated about 6,000 miners moved into the city from their coal pits in Cambria County.

Sidney D. Evans, Bethlehem official, declared:

"The Cambria works will be reopened at the earliest possible moment. When we shut down last Sunday, we planned to stay closed for an indefinite period. The furnaces were banked. It will take time to get them going. We are pushing ahead as rapidly as possible. Men are now returning to prepare the mills for operations."

3. At Warren, Ohio—A statement by C. I. O. leaders declared: "The strike is still on. We haven't lost a man. The picket line is at full strength. The C. I. O. has yet to be stopped, and we know that it is not going to be dropped in Warren.55

Blast Wrecks Bridge.

Earlier in the day, a dynamite explosion wrecked a highway bridge 2 miles from Republic Steel's Warren plant, and another blast occurred near the gates of Republic's open-hearth furnace.

4. At Canto, Ohio—Republic officials announced they would reopen all closed units immediately, calling back about 3,000 men in addition to the 2,200 men who have been working one of the five units throughout the strike.

Sheriff Joseph Nist conferred with Brig. Gen. William Marlin and asked for the aid of troops in enforcing a court injunction to restrain picketing.

Two bombings rocked the northeast section of Canton. Police said the last blast ripped out a section of a spur track of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad leading into the Republic Steel plant. The second explosion, reported by William Webster, a Republic worker, tore off a section of the front of his home and shattered nearby windows.

5. At Cleveland—Federal mediators, after communicating by telephone with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, decided to stay on the job, pending final answer to their appeal for a "man-to-man" peace conference with C. I. O. officials.

The Inland Steel Co. tonight joined Republic Steel and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. in

The board had suggested heads of the four companies meet with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in a final effort to negotiate peace.

Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube officials quit the Federal mediation conference with a statement they had nothing more to say—that they would make no agreement, written or oral, with Lewis' C. I. O., which they called "irresponsible."

Awaits Bethlehem Reply.

The board awaited an answer from the other "little steel" company, Bethlehem, with faint hopes of receiving a more amenable reply.

Instructions for the mass reopening of mills in Ohio's Mahoning Valley were issued by Maj. Gen. Gilson D. Light, as follows:

"The Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube and all other plants will be given free passage for men and freight exactly as before the strike.

"All restrictions on all movements of any kind are off at all points."

Truck Kills Md. Picket.

Cambridge, Md., June 25.—Conciliation efforts in the Phillips Packing Co. strike halted abruptly today shortly after a truck killed a picket near one of the company's six closed plants.

Col. Albanus Phillips, president of the third largest vegetable-packing company in the country, said he was closing all his plants. He said the action was taken because of "the admitted inability of representatives of law and order to cope with the situation."

The picket, John Cephas, colored, was killed by a truck which came down the road toward one of the closed plants. Other pickets said he dodged out of the way of the truck but that it swerved and struck him. The truck driver said he thought Cephas was trying to stop him and that he turned the truck to avoid the man, but hit him accidentally.

The driver and his helper were held in an unannounced jail. State's Attorney J. Gorman Hill said he feared "retaliatory action" by the strikers.

Subway Strike Threatened.

New York, June 25 (U.P.).—The employes of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co., who belong to the C. I. O.'s Transport Workers Union of America, tonight adopted a resolution authorizing their officials to call a strike of all B.-M. T. employes unless the company agrees Monday to an employes' election to determine a collective bargaining agency. About 7,000 union members attended the meeting.

The B.-M. T. Co. is one of the major operators of transportation lines in the metropolitan area, carrying passengers by subway, elevated, trolley and bus.

Cleaners Face Strike Paralysis At Peak Season

employers set as the "deadline" for a reply, today at 10 a. m. or noon.

Describing conditions against which the union is protesting, Mrs. Julia Katz, of the Women's Trade Union League, who is secretary of the committee organizing the workers, said that in many plants women, most of them colored, are working 10 hours a day for $8 and $10 a week. Drivers and men employed for inside jobs were reported receiving wages as low as $12 for a week that during the busy season, such as the industry is just now entering, runs up to 60 hours.

The wage minimums asked by the union would substantially improve the workers' incomes, and the hour demands would cut the maximum number of hours per week to 40.

Pickets yesterday afternoon were posted before Premier, Regal, Needles, Globe, Rubenstein, Anacostia Tailors, Economy, Senate Federal, Master Presser, Aristo and Vanity. Picketing was also going on before others plants, which although not on strike, were reported by the strikers to be accepting laundry and cleaning work from the closed shops.

Interference against picketing was charged against police yesterday in a communication Cousens sent Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. The union president protested against calling the riot squad to the Federal Cleaning plant on Thursday.

Girdler Shuns Roosevelt as Strike Arbiter

Republic Asks Aid of U. S. Army in Ohio Steel 'War.'

right to appeal the result of any election among employes of his plants, conducted by the National Labor Relations Board if the voting were conducted as in other elections held by the board.

Girdler had been in Washington to testify before the Senate Postoffice Committee on charges that strikers had interfered with the mails at Niles and Warren, Ohio. On the stand Thursday he said he would never sign a contract with the "racketeering C. I. O."

Perkins' Office Boy.

To reporters yesterday, Girdler criticized members of the three-man mediation board appointed by Secretary of Labor Perkins "with the approval of the President."

He referred to Charles P. Taft 2d, board chairman and son of the late President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft, as "a man who likes to talk about the things his father did." He called Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor and another member of the board, "Secretary Perkin's office boy."

He was likewise uncomplimentary toward Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the Wisconsin University law school and third member of the board.

Girdler revealed that Taft had urged him to meet John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., in an effort to settle the strike. He replied that he would "never sit down with Lewis," later modifying his stand by adding "under present circumstances."

Lewis Scorned.

"Why should I sit at the same table with a man who has called me an assassin and a monomaniac?" he asked reporters.

Then, he said, Taft suggested that he sign a contract with the mediation board itself, rather than with the C. I. O., but he rejected this proposal because he said the mediation board had no power to enforce any agreement that might be reached.

The Republic chairman insisted that 90 per cent of its employes were loyal and said "a fair election" would prove it. But he pointed out that the corporation has no authority to call for an election under labor board auspices.

Asked whether he would attend a conference here with the union leaders, if President Roosevelt should request it, he said he would "cross that bridge when we come to it."

President's Request.

He said President Roosevelt had communicated with him only once to date on the strike situation, having called to inform him of his decision to name the madiation board. Girdler said the call was delayed in reaching him and he had already learned of the board's appointment when the President's call came. He acceded to Mr. Roosevelt's request that he "co-operate with the board," he said.

The demurrer filed by Republic, one of the four independent steel companies involved in the strike, said there is no authority in law for the Postoffice Department to suspend part of the service, but only for suspension of "all of the service on any post road or part thereof."

"If some mail matter is being delivered and others being refused because of the displeasure and ensuing violence of C. I. O.," it added, "then the Postoffice Department is indeed accepting the dictation of the C. I. O. strikers as to what it may or may not deliver."

Challenge to United States.

Holding that the Constitution gives Congress sole power to regulate the postal service, the company asserted "that Congress has defined what may and what may not be mailed, and has expressly provided that matter of the type offered by plaintiff shall be proper mailable matter."

It referred to the present reported situation as "perhaps the first successful challenge to the authority of the American Government in securing the safe and prompt transportation of the mails.

Meanwhile, members of the Senate Postoffice Committee were in dispute over whether Postmaster General Farley should be called to testify in its hearings. Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, has insisted that Farley be called next week, but Chairman McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, is demanding that Bridges first disclose what he wants to ask the Postmaster General.

Clarifying The Issues.

As the Federal Mediation Board points out in its public statement the issues involved in the steel strike have at least been clarified. The companies are clearly unwilling to negotiate with the C. I. O. under any conditions. They will neither sign an agreement nor make oral commitments. Mr. Girdler in his testimony before a Senate committee, and the four companies in their joint statement, have also made that clear. They stubbornly refuse to meet with representatives of the strikers either now or later.

The Mediation Board suggested that a provisional agreement be signed which might be subsequently torn up if a secret election showed a majority of employes did not desire the C. I. O. as their representative. That, too, was rejected. Of course, this proposal to negotiate first and determine the representative character of the C. I. O. afterward would give that organization a better chance to establish its claims at a subsequent election. But it was, notwithstanding, a basis on which direct negotiations might have been reasonably inaugurated.

With martial law ended in Johnstown, the general strike called off in Warren and the Governors and local officials of both Pennsylvania and Ohio showing increased determination to protect nonstrikers from molestation, the companies are in good position to bargain without seeming to yield to lawless threats. Hence, their adamant stand is the more unjustifiable.

That they prefer to risk a repetition of the riots, disorders and assaults that have marked the course of the conflict simply means that they are resolved to win at all costs. Yet in the end they cannot win any lasting or worth-while victory by such tactics. The future relations of management and employes must be established on a firm and friendly basis by direct negotiations if the country is to be freed from recurrent strikes with their accompaniment of violence.

If the C. I. O. is irresponsible, if it fails to live up to its contracts, the steel managements would be justified in refusing to deal with it in the future. At this stage of organization, however, a feeling of responsibility has hardly had time to develop. Certainly there will be little encouragement given to responsible action if industrial managements follow the policies of Mr. Girdler and his colleagues.

Cancer Institution at Last.

A gift of $10,000,000 for scientific research was recently received by Yale University. Since Yale already had an endowment of more than $95,000,000, this would scarcely seem big news for the country at large. Yet it is of more than ordinary significance, for this vast sum is to be dedicated to a study of cancer, deaths from which have increased 60 per cent since 1900.

Hundreds of specialists supported by millions of dollars are fighting cancer today. But the great majority of them are concentrating on its clinical aspects, devising techniques for saving and prolonging the lives of its victims. Relatively little effort or money has been available for research into the causes of cancer. A recent survey by Fortune Magazine indicated that the total resources behind this fundamental problem in the United States totaled less than $5,000,000. The Yale fund will triple this and should stimulate progress toward a solution of the mystery at an even greater ratio.

This hope is encouraged by the character of the advisory board which has been named to administer the fund (the gift of Starling W. Childs, whose wife recently died of cancer). One is Dr. Ross G. Harrison, Yale biologist, who demonstrated the virtual immortality of cell life, basis of all cancers. Another is Dr. Rudolph J. Anderson, also of Yale, who even now is making extensive chemical analyses for the International Cancer Research Foundation. A third is Dr. Peyton Rous, of the Rockefeller Institute, famed for experiments indicating that certain cancers, in chickens at least, can be transmitted without cells. Drs. Stanhope Bayne-Jones and Milton C. Winternitz, both of Yale and both noted in their fields, complete the board.

The Nation, then, at last will have an adequately financed cancer institution. For years, millions of dollars have been spent annually on research in such fields as cotton cultivation, milk production and forest utilization. Now a comparable effort will be possible in respect to cancer—the country's second greatest killer—accounting every year for the deaths of 135,000 persons.

Behind Jefferson Island.

Jefferson Island is probably resounding with more wisecracks, fish stories and backslapping than with serious discussion of the Nation's problems. A gathering of so many Democratic executives and legislators in the holiday atmosphere of their secluded resort is almost certain to be primarily a jamboree. No one will be surprised if the chief sounds which reach the ears of the press on the mainland are guffaws and hilarious manifestations of good fellowship.

Yet one would be blind to ignore the significance of the gathering. The very fact that such an outing is being held in the midst of a Congressional session suggests that a delicate problem has arisen within the ranks of the New Deal. Administration leaders are keenly aware of the growing opposition to various policies sponsored by the President. They know, too, that recent revolts on the part of various groups have their origin in deep-seated differences in political philosophy.

Ordinary discussions of national problems and policies might be conveniently held in Washington. But the present situation calls for something more than routine conferences. It is sufficiently delicate to justify the backslapping technique. No doubt the President decided to meet Democratic members of Congress at Jefferson Island for the very purpose of supplanting formal discussions by the more subtle method of exchanging yarns and eating hot dogs together.

Presumably there will be some serious discussion of the legislative difficulties by which Congress is all but overwhelmed. But such talk is likely to be confined to leaders who have not ventured off the New Deal reservation. It is reasonable to suppose, moreover, that the chief effort will be to establish a better understanding instead of outlining a program.

The outing itself is much less important, therefore, than the trends to which it has directed attention. In line with forecasts following the November election, the impotence of the Republican Party has brought to the surface a formidable opposition within the ranks of the New Deal. Numerous old-line Democrats and quite a number of liberals have decided that they can no longer support expedient measures merely because they go to Congress with the President's indorsement.

The fundamental character of this schism was clearly emphasized in the adverse report of the Senate Judiciary Committee on the bill to enlarge the Supreme Court. In reality, that report is a denunciation of what it calls "a mad mob march" toward progress, and a warning against "personal government." Of course, legislators who fear that the technique of democracy is endangered by some of the measures which the President is trying to push through the present Congress will not be brought into line by a jamboree.

President Roosevelt's gestures of good will are undoubtedly a sincere and timely effort to facilitate an enormous legislative program. He should realize, however, that the present schism is almost entirely of his own making. With only casual preparations, he asked Congress to accept a measure "that violates every sacred tradition of American democracy." And he has persistently refused to acknowledge his mistake or to abandon his efforts to subjugate the judicial branch of the Government.

If the President expects to restore harmony within his Administration he will certainly have to abandon this discredited measure. And, as the price of his mistake, he will doubtless have to yield to members of Congress a considerable measure of the leadership which both houses have heretofore been willing to accept from the Chief Executive.

Cinema Survey.

For the past few years the owner of a chain of British movie theaters has been circulating questionnaires throughout England, testing the likes and dislikes of his patrons. The 1937 survey, which brought replies from 160,000 persons, shows that Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and Charles Laughton are the preferred screen actors, while Norma Shearer, Myrna Loy and Greta Garbo lead the list of actresses.

Ronald Colman, who rated fifth place, apparently has not appeared often enough recently to hold his No. 1 place of other years. Norma Shearer, in contrast, continues to lead the field as she has for the past six years. Quite evidently, Britain's conservative tastes extend beyond beefsteak and politics, for both Shearer and Colman habitually appear in good, substantial plays.

When it comes to dislikes, English audiences hiss first at James Cagney and Mae West, the latter particularly. Generally, too, Hollywood comedians do not appeal to them. Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, ZaSu Pitts, the Marx Brothers, Joe E. Brown and Eddie Cantor rank well up on the "dislike" list. This lends support to the theory that British humor is based on a unique formula.

It will be interesting to learn the British reaction to the new picture, "Captains Courageous." The warm reception of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," indicates that American scenes and circumstances are no obstacle to a movie's popularity in England. In "Captains Courageous" they will find another story peculiar to this country. They will see a new sort of sailing, a sea sequence without a cat-o'-nine-tails or a snarled command, and a romance without a woman in it—all against a marine background admirably arranged and photographed. They will see, too, a maudlin distortion of their own Kipling's introduction and finale to the story. And if they have the forthrightness the questionnaire results indicate, they will head their list of dislikes next year with this all too frequent characteristic of recent movies adapted from books.

The C. I. O. In Government.

The stormy scenes enacted in the strike-ridden steel areas have distracted attention from the campaign just launched here in Washington to bring Government employes into the C. I. O. fold. Several thousand members of expelled or suspended lodges formerly belonging to the A. F. G. E.—an A. F. of L. organization—are expected to form the nucleus of the new United Federal Workers of America. However, an intensive drive is planned to attract unorganized groups and any others who may choose to desert their present allegiance. With the preponderant majority of Government employes still outside the union movement, the C. I. O. organizers have a challenging task ahead of them.

Jacob Baker, the new president of the U. F. W. A. and former assistant WPA administrator, is familiar with the problems of the service. Hence, he undoubtedly realizes that the organization methods used in private industry are not suited to Government employment. The strike, for instance, would be intolerable if used to extort concessions from the Government. Fortunately, the new C. I. O. leadership recognizes the dangerous potentialities of strikes involving suspension of essential public services and is reported to have taken a definite stand against them.

However, there are other less conspicuous evils that have to be guarded against in the organization of Government workers. It is very difficult to form a democratic, effective type of union and at the same time preserve the conservative balance that prevents rash action. Some members of the lodges that have seceded or been expelled from the A. F. G. E. complain, for example, of the alleged domination of that organization by Government officials of high rank. In the governmental hierarchy these individuals are really bosses, not fellow workers.

It is said that the interests of the rank and file cannot be adequately urged by such representatives. To meet that objection, the C. I. O. membership will exclude bureau chiefs and divisional and departmental heads who have the power to hire and fire, promote or demote, employes under them. This seems a rational arrangement, although it has the disadvantage of eliminating many responsible, experienced Government employes who might save younger, undisciplined members from making regrettable mistakes.

A great deal of useful work can be accomplished by the C. I. O. organizers if they go about their task in the proper way. The Government worker needs the protection of an organization for many purposes; especially does he need to be protected against the kind of discrimination that flourishes under any system in which spoilsmen rove at large. A strong independent union can perform valuable services for its members by preventing arbitrary dismissals, unjust demotions and unfair promotions. With a systematic method of handling grievances, such protection can be provided in an orderly way with the effect of improving the morale of the service.

If, on the other hand, the new C. I. O. lodges should spend their time lobbying for legislation to raise salaries and lower hours of work, if they were to resist essential economies and fight against any reduction in the number of jobs, they would become public liabilities. In fact, they would be among the most menacing of those pressure groups that terrorize weak politicians into supporting bad laws.

That some advocates of the new unionization drive take this short-sighted view of its purpose is evident from an editorial in the current issue of The Government Organizer. "You cannot pick up a newspaper," it said, "without reading of a dozen C. I. O. victories. With the assumption of jurisdiction over Federal employes, the press will soon tell of victories won by Government employes. The leadership of C. I. O. has been such that if a program including a five-day, thirty-five-hour week is supported by C. I. O., the Federal employe may be assured that that program will be carried out. This is just the type of leadership we have been seeking."

If that is the type of leadership desired, good citizens can only hope that those who ask for it will be disappointed.

One thing that will take your mind off your troubles for a while is to go fishing and become the center of population for the chiggers of three counties.

Problems Of The Trailer.

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

In this age of wanderlust, when travel is such an easily purchasable commodity, no one any longer dogmatically adheres to the old fiction that "home is where you hang your childhood." Not in this day, when you can pick up your home for a song and ride on endless highways! When the "trailer" first made its appearance, some writers erroneously assumed that its appeal would be limited to retired railroad conductors and Government clerks; that it would take the place of the little cottage by the sea. But today in the moving and growing metropolis on the bounding main highway are found all classes of American society, including notable members of the intelligentsia.

What problems this moving situation will present to the States remains to be seen. Certainly they could not be amiss in moving promptly to provide any protection possible to the beauties of the highway, so rapidly becoming a flowering wilderness of hot-dog stands and billboards. The beauty of the scene must be preserved for the gypsy at the moving window!

"No Radicalism."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We write this as steadfast, true Americans, with no such radicalism as was expressed in the letter written by Presley Carger in your issue of June 24.

We would first like to ask what he means by "his legislators" in his reference to our Congress. We have always been taught as good Americans that Congress is the representative of the people and not of a dictator. The opposition to the imperious Supreme Court proposal by many of the Congressmen has proved they are not "his legislators," thank God.

We also would like to know how a nation can be expected to follow the leadership of any man who acquires for himself the highest position in America on promises which are forgotten as soon as the goal is attained. For example, we were promised no higher taxes. Was this promise kept? No. Abundant life was also promised, but can this come about by requests to close the steel mills? Positively not.

As to the devoted and humble servants advocated by Mr. Carger, we are thoroughly convinced that such radicals have undoubtedly mistaken these United States of America for a country that has already been stripped of its liberties.

Auditorium Site.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is respectfully suggested that due consideration be given to a site for an auditorium adjacent to the east side of the Union Station.

This is an ideal location for the auditorium and is certainly the most centrally situated site. It is accessible from every part of the city, the Union Station being the very hub of street car and bus transportation. Aside from the local angle, it is located right at the only railroad depot in the city and, if necessary, railroad tracks could be run into the auditorium itself and passengers could be unloaded without having to transfer at all. In the case of exhibitions, conventions, etc., equipment and all necessary paraphernalia could be unloaded right at the auditorium from freight and baggage cars.

As to the Pennsylvania avenue site now under consideration, it is pointed out that to erect such a large building there would certainly mar the beauty of all the Government buildings in the Mall and, without doubt would overshadow and dwarf the Mellon Art Gallery. There are like objections to the other sites suggested.

Suggestion To C. I. O.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the C. I. O. is American in its ideals, as Mr. Godfrey Monroe claims in his letters to The Post, why don't its leaders use American methods? The terrorist methods they use and their sit-down strikes are communistic methods.

Why does not the C. I. O. incorporate and use the millions John L. Lewis is collecting in "check-off" dues to buy stock in the open market in American business? This would be American and would give labor a voice in management. But the C. I. O. will never consent to buying stock because the labor leaders and many professional agitators would soon be out of their soft berths.

Compliment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to compliment The Post on its editorial, "The Immediate Task," printed in the edition of June 21, 1937.

Further, I'd like to add a word of appreciation for The Post's advertising policy, which apparently was broad enough to admit the New York Sun's "Herrin Massacre" article and editorial.

Government And Medicine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposal of the New York Medical Society that Government shall interest itself in hospitalization and public health is of vast importance to the Nation. There is an Hawaiian motto, attributed to their hero, Kamehameha, which is translated, "In the health of the people lies the life of the land." The conquering king realized that basically the nation is dependent upon its people's physical well being.

In this country we have almost ignored this, save as to contagious disease. Millions of women about to become mothers are unable to secure hospitalization; babies needing minor operations or other treatment cannot secure either; grown people without means must suffer because they lack funds for medical treatment, or hospital treatment, or an operation.

Some suppose charity provides for all this, but it does not. For the average man there is no free institution. And of all the profiteering in America, none is in advance of that in some branches of medical practice.

The United States Public Health Service does not have an appropriation as large as the total sum spent by half a dozen big cities for dog catchers. It is among the smallest for any bureau.

Some years ago a physician who wrote a daily column for a newspaper syndicate, and who now has passed away, started a movement to create a system of Government hospitals, one for each state, each to be built within reasonable cost, but to be modern, and well equipped, where the average worker, white collar worker or other, might get good attention at reasonable cost or where, if he had no means, it would be given without charge. He met a solid phalanx of physicians who preferred that many should suffer rather than a few get low priced treatment, and thus deprive them of high-priced fees.

The new movement is not very heartily endorsed by physicians. But it will be, when it is understood, by the majority of the public and, later, by the physicians, who are perhaps a little slow in absorbing the idea of a new policy.

Out of the millions being spent, it might be well to spend a great deal for public hospitals, to subsidize clinics, and for other things that will aid in alleviating sickness and making this a better country, physically.

JOHN GOVERICK.
Fredericksburg, Va., June 22.

Housing Subsidies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Wagner-Steagall housing bill would be seriously damaged by a proposal advanced by Secretary Morgenthau. This would give an outright cash grant of 40 per cent of the total cost of construction to private builders. It has been demonstrated time and time again that subsidies of this sort fill the pockets of speculators, with absolutely none of it trickling down to the tenant.

The Wagner act proposes instead Government loans for construction and then regular annual subsidies to make up that part of the rate which the tenant cannot pay. This serves as a constant check against waste and profiteering and could be stopped at any time, if necessary.

Secretary Morgenthau's proposal would tie up the Government for a period of 40 or 60 years, while the subsidies granted to builders under the Wagner act could be stopped at any time.

On Matteoti.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To compare that noble, immortal, liberty defender Matteoti, who was murdered by Mussolini, with the Fascist criminals, caught red-handed by the Soviets, is like comparing our Abraham Lincoln with Mussolini. The author of your unfair, anti-Soviet editorial of June 18 did just this. We, the Italian-American anti-Fascists, are grieved and insulted by such comparison by this Fascist ravishment of truth, by this cunning perversion of our American ideals.

Wagner Bill And Slum Clearance.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Your comment on "A national housing policy" was most interesting because it recognized the necessity for slum clearance and slum reclamation work in connection with a housing program. This is true whether it be a national or a local program. And it is also true that even the provision of public housing for those families whose incomes are $1,000 a year or less, when combined with a city-wide program of slum clearance and re-use of such areas are but two factors in the even greater problem of the economic rehabilitation of our cities.

Not only must housing be built and slums be reclaimed but blighting in the central residential areas must be arrested and the excessive decentralization of a city into the suburbs must be balanced by a redevelopment of the strictly urban areas.

In the preface of a brochure published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States entitled "Balanced Rebuilding of Cities" is this statement: "If each city resident could be made to realize the very large extent to which his savings and investments are in urban areas, then doubtless more interest would be manifested in the preservation of the character and stability of cities and in the city development programs of chambers of commerce and other city groups designed to check blight and excessive decentralization."

The assessed valuation of property in the 94 largest cities in 1935 was over $56,000,000,000 with a fair value of $70,000,000,000. Against this there were in 1935 mortgage investments of over $16,000,000,000 and $8,296,000,000 of municipal bonds.

It is this investment that is threatened by the population trends and area demoralization through slums and blight and decentralization in American cities.

The program that must be put under way, fortunately, can be started under the provisions of the Wagner-Steagall bill. Very definitely the bill makes provisions for slum clearance and slum reclamation. To assume that the local housing authorities are going to allow the slums in their cities to remain while they go out into vacant land to erect new low-rent housing is to ignore the basic purpose that caused American cities to establish housing authorities and to maintain them through the past discouraging years when the Federal program for housing ignored the realities in the city planning programs.

It would also be necessary to assume that the new United States housing authority would be headed by men totally unaware of the larger aspects of what is clearly outlined as the real purpose of the Wagner-Steagall bill.

City slums are far greater in extent than the areas required for housing. Much slum area is unfit for use for housing but does afford ideal facilities for a profitable re-use for other public uses. Many cities find in such areas the answer to their traffic congestion through the construction of large automobile parks and the exclusion of curb parkers from the streets of the business section.

The Wagner-Steagall bill is a move in the right direction. No one doubts that like other social legislation it will require amendment and amplification as the program proceeds but all friends of low-rent housing, all advocates of slum clearance and of reclamation of slum and blighting areas may be sure that these things can and will be done under the law.

The Post Impressionist

Madeline.

As I was going into the locker room I met a friend of mine coming out whom I hadn't seen in more than a year. We used to live in the same fraternity house, and once we roomed together. "How are you?" Bob asked as we shook hands, and then, "Did you know Madeline was dead?"

"No," I said. I was surprised. "Gosh, I'm surprised. I didn't think she would ever be. Somehow I can't think of her as being dead——"

Madeline was the colored cook at the fraternity house. When she first arrived in that kitchen to dominate the rear—and frequently the front—of the house was not within Bob's memory or mine. She had just always been there—big, fat, dictatorial, shrewd and kind. And yet, to the almost continual stream of colored table-boys and house-boys, she was a dusky Amazon who ruled them with a short fat hand that often held iron—in the form of a butcher knife.

When I think back over the uniqueness of Madeline's position and the uniqueness of her character I am filled with a real admiration for her. The part she played in the lives of the boys who came and went, always eating ravenously from the tables she always kept bountifully supplied, is unequaled in my knowledge. There was practically nothing she did not know about the 30-odd boys in the house.

She almost never went upstairs and yet she knew who roomed with whom and how they got along together. She knew all the girls who came to dinner and to dances at the house, and had been known more than once to make dates for different boys when after a prolonged ringing, she finally answered the telephone . . . "Mr. Morgan, Miss Hill called up 'bout fo' o'clock fuh you to play bridge at her house tonight, an' I tol' her you would. If you already got a date you better call her right away."

She was scrupulously honest. I remember once when she loaned one boy $10 so he could go to Sweetbriar to see his girl. She made an entry on a calendar she always kept in the pantry and when the time came for her money to be paid back, she asked for and got it. When she left the house at night both the pantry door and the refrigerator were locked—and only Madeline had the keys. Once I asked her about this. "Law, chile," she said, "if I didn't lock them doors, when I got here tomorrow mawning there wouldn't be enough to eat in this house to feed a cockroach!"

Madeline had a good business head. Once I heard her say something about "her trucks" and by questioning learned that she owned two motor trucks that she rented out for hauling sand and gravel. And they were paid for too. But she did not let her capital stand in the way of accepting what was her due. On Sunday at the end of dinner Madeline's weekly tip was collected and presented to her by the head of the chapter, and then it was she who divided the sum and tipped the other servants. She was fair with them too; it was just that she considered this method one of her prerogatives.

She used to threaten on an average of once a year to quit, and then her wages would be raised a little and she stayed on. One year, the story was told, it was decided by the chapter that finances would not allow an increase for Madeline. Madeline was advised of this. Immediately her dark face grew darker: if she didn't get more money she would sell the ritual of the fraternity to a colored lodge that had already approached her. It was a well known fact that in spite of the utmost secrecy constantly maintained in that one thing, Madeline could quote long passages from the proceedings. The boys laughed, but—significantly—Madeline did not leave.

Nor was Madeline's only connection with the active chapter. Unofficially she kept herself so posted that she served as an up-to-date alumni bureau. Of all the boys who came and went, leaving school to get into business and settle down, she never forgot one. She read the papers constantly and was proud of anything "important" done by any one she knew. Visiting alumni who had lived in the house always went to the kitchen to chat a little with her, and she often gave one bits of news he had not been able to pick up any other place.

I can see Madeline now, sitting at the kitchen table before the range, wearing a white apron and a white cap, a curious mixture of the modern and the old-fashioned. If it were after dinner, she would be resting and smoking the one cigarette she used daily. Because there was no lunch served in the house she had probably been to the movies that afternoon.

And one of the most vivid memories of her I have is the morning she came into the long living-room the night after the house had burned. The place was a charred shambles. Madeline stopped in the door. "Gawd," she said, "I didn't know you-all had a party last night!" Then she went over to the skeleton that was left of the grand piano and, planting one sturdy finger on a yellowed key that brought forth only a faint ping, said, "A St. Louis Woman Was the Cause of It All!"

I had not seen Madeline for a long time but I shall miss just knowing that she is not there.

Fair Enough

Chicago Cops' Background.

Chicago.

ROTTEN GOVERNMENT has been a joke in Chicago and in Illinois at large throughout the experience of all men now living in the State, but the day cannot be far off when the situation must explode, for no government can go on this way forever. In fact, it is a marvel that the skeleton of government has held together this long against the pressure of graft, corruption, waste and unbelievable incompetence and cynicism on the part of thieving, ignorant public officials and small-time parasites.

The man does not live who can remember when Chicago had a decent city administration, although there have been a couple of nominally respectable mayors and a few ineffective political reformers in minor positions. These invariably have been hooted out of office as sissies, and the respectable citizens have been as much to blame as the gang politicians and the colonized foreign vote.

If there is any decent civic spirit in Chicago it never has been organized, and politically it has never had any more power than the freckle-faced vote or the knock-kneed vote.

It may be added that the newspapers, on the whole, have been as venal as the politicians, and that the people have been kidded into false enthusiasms for dirty candidates so often that nowadays every motive of the newspapers falls under suspicion. It may be added, further, that labor has been one of the most murderous and greedy rackets in a thoroughly corrupt city and is no better qualified to clean up the mess and provide decent government.

• • • •

THIS IS the background and a capsuled summary of the events leading up to the slaughter of the steel workers in South Chicago on Memorial Day. It will be made out that the pistol fire and clubbing were unprovoked, but witnesses for the defense will testify that many of the pickets carried lengths of iron pipe, bolts, clubs and bricks and that the point-blank shooting did not break out until the "peaceful" marchers had let fly a rain of missiles hardly calculated to improve the health of the policemen.

Chicago cops are tough cops, and the force has no nice appreciation of civil rights. They get little professional training, and they have always had an example of graft, pull, political immunity and irresponsibility from the dominant spirits of the town. This does not justify, but it does explain to some extent, the personal ferocity of their reprisal when they were again attacked by a mob which had sent some of their comrades to the hospital in a previous riot suppressed by less deadly methods.

They have about the same discipline and respect for law that the citizens have, and the citizens' attitude toward law and government is plainly indicated by the character of the men whom they habitually tolerate in public office.

So the slaughter of the "peaceful" pickets was strictly in the Chicago mood and may be charged back to decades of indifference and corruption. In this case the cops got out of temper and behaved just as John L. Lewis' miners did at Herrin, Ill., 15 years ago, though with not quite the same savagery.

To prosecute a few cops for murder in this case would do no good.

In the first place, in the condition of local sentiment, convictions would be no more likely than in the Herrin massacre, where Mr. Lewis' peaceful pickets all went free.

And, anyway, the case calls for a complete reform of the system which produced that type of cop. It calls for more than a mere change of administration, for one administration is as rotten as another in Chicago, and a change of party or faction never means anything but a transfer of the grafting franchise.

• • • •

WHAT CHICAGO must have is a great public prosecutor and crusader, but not a demagogue, who can rouse the whole town to an appreciation of the corruption and free-style robbery which most members of the present population have always accepted as the normal thing in government.

God only knows what has held the town and the State together so long, but they will collapse into some horrible mess if the situation is not relieved.

As an example of the quality of government in Illinois, consider this—the Constitution forbids a State income tax; so to support the incredible horde of parasites who live on the workers and producers the State is now collecting a 3 per cent sales tax on everything, including food.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Your Error, Mister.

Do you like the job you're holding?
Would you like to stay on there?
Well, you're out of luck, for soldiers
Will give you the well-known air.

Do the hours rather suit you?
Are you very satisfied?
Well, here comes the State militia
And you cannot get inside.

Do you want to make a living?
Did you think this was your right?
Well, the Governor says, "Beat it!"
As he shuts the mill down tight.

Did you think you were protected
In your right to work or not?
Well, you're wrong. The politicians
They can put you on the spot.

Were you told we had officials
Who would let nobody take
Law and order for a sleigh-ride?
Well, you made one big mistake.

Did you think this still a Nation
Where the law held some respect
Even from the politicians?
Well, you weren't quite correct.

Did you think the right to labor
Was protected by the State?
Well, you'd better wash your eyes out
For it's not that way of late.

Did they teach you back in school days
'Twas a government of laws—
Not of men and opportunists?
Well, the notion's full of flaws.

Individuals, they taught you,
Had their freedom guaranteed?
Well, the whole idea was silly,
Very cockeyed, yes indeed.

Did you think the State militia
Only came in time of mobs?
Well, my boy, you're quite old-fashioned—
Now it keeps men out of jobs!

Election News From Miami.

Hi:
Your Northerners who come trooping down around Miami in the chilly season might be interested to know what happened in the elections down here. Well, the old guard is on its back. Quigg, a storm center eight or nine years ago when Miami was wide open, is back as chief of police.

At Miami Beach, John Levi won out as Mayor and the old city council was re-elected. Levi is Miami Beach's first citizen. It was he who came down with Carl Fisher 30 years ago. Levi was delivering a new cruiser to Fisher at Jacksonville, but was so impressed by Miami Beach that he urged Fisher to come there. Fisher saw the possibilities and was developing Miami Beach before he knew it.

Germany's Tight Belt

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

GERMANY'S export surplus for May was 8,500,000 marks, but while this was the lowest thus far this year, May, one is reminded, was a month of holidays, and when those and the Sundays are subtracted, the figure was really favorable. Germany's export drive, it is further reported, is "putting her foreign trade on a healthier basis."

This conclusion may be true, but only as far as the armament industry benefits from it, and only temporarily. For the masses of the people it means progressive impoverishment. Moreover, the shortage of raw materials in almost all branches of industry and handicraft is now all but catastrophic, and is steadily growing worse.

German export goods are sold abroad at prices below the cost of production, despite the fact that prices have risen somewhat in the last month. The losses incurred are met in part by contributions from all industries, but only in part; the rest must be borne by the exporter, who is thus compelled to protect himself by higher prices for domestic consumers. This, in turn, is rendered difficult by the government's price-fixing decrees, but the prices fixed must be maintained, as far as possible, in order to head off inflation. Thus any increase in export trade in proportion to domestic trade must endanger either the industries involved or eventually upset fixed prices.

Opel's Annual Report Illustrates Situation.

THE SITUATION is graphically illustrated by the annual report of the Opel automobile works. This industry, like all export industries, is compelled to use its available raw materials first of all to meet export demands; only when those are met may it use what is left for supplying the domestic market. In 1936 the Opel works built 15,700 cars for export and 105,000 for German buyers—that is, almost seven times as many for the home market. Today the ratio is about 1 to 3.

With this ratio, says the company's report, "the company has about reached the limit of what is economically tolerable." And the Frankfort Gazette, commenting on the report, says that "the supplementary compensations and costs that arise in this manner are, it must be said, considerable." It adds: "The announced ratio of 1 to 3 seems to be the general ratio in the automobile industry."

This is probably too optimistic, for it is to be borne in mind that the majority of the Opel stock belongs to General Motors, and hence the company is in a position to obtain dollar credits unavailable to other concerns.

The German Institute for Economic Research published at the end of May a lengthy report on industry's reserve stocks. It found that "it is certain that no considerable reduction of reserve stocks has taken place in the whole economic structure." This statement is astonishing on its face, but actually it is not, for one notes that the men responsible for it, economists with a lingering desire to be objective and truthful, have italicized "the whole." Stated thus, the report is true: No considerable reduction has come in "the whole" economic structure. But if one disregards the armament industry, a different picture is presented. The National Socialist magazine, Deutsche Volkswirtschaft, reported in its second May issue:

"In their prudent fixing of the amount of the new Reich loan, the leaders of the German credit policies took into account the fact that in the last months a decrease of reserves of great extent has taken place in important branches of economic life, although the December balances of the stock companies had, as a rule, shown an increase of their stocks on hand."

Government Loans Keep Money Liquid.

IN OTHER WORDS, the liquidity on the German money market this year is due to the fact that moneys which would otherwise have gone into replenishing stocks of materials had no other outlet for investment than government loans.

Almost daily new decrees appear, limiting the use of this or that material. All-woolen fabrics may not be manufactured, metal may not be used for burial urns or scores of other usual purposes, children ransack garbage cans for tinfoil or bits of metal or bone, experiments are being made to make whale meat popular, sausage is being made from codfish, "guns are more important than butter." There is a serious shortage of wheat, rye and fodder, of meat, vegetables, fruits. Military requirements for iron and concrete compel private buildings to be erected with quarry stones, increasing their cost manyfold.

Roofers are no longer permitted to use sheet zinc for gutters. Sheet iron, coated electrochemically with zinc, is used, and must be painted, but white lead is not available, and paints that can be had do not resist rust and weather.

A story is told of an American who, dissatisfied with a consignment of goods, telegraphed: "Cancel my other orders immediately." The reply came: "Cannot cancel immediately; you must wait your turn." The well-known firm of Guenther Wagner, in Hanover, manufacturers of office supplies, notifies its customers that owing to the quality of materials available to it, it can accept no complaints or cancellations.

German paperhangers are forbidden to use flour in making paste. The substitutes are so bad that the decree is frequently violated. The Nazis have issued a summons to apprentices to denounce their masters in all cases of violations of the decree.

The firm of Rudolf Mommert, in Liegnitz, which manufactures baby carriages, attached to goods sold a tag reading: "We accept no responsibility for damages due to the character of the materials." The secret political police started a prosecution against the head of the firm because of "statements inimical to the state."

A chicken farmer in Dusseldorf advertised that he must sell 300 hens because of lack of fodder. He was sent to jail for six weeks for his crime.

House painters are up in arms because of the poor quality of the materials permitted them. Oil paints may not be used, on penalty of fines up to 30,000 marks, for painting houses or rooms. Paint for furniture may contain not more than 15 per cent of fats, door and window paints not more than 30 per cent. An "Ersatz" varnish must be used. Its official designation is "E. L." The painters have dubbed it, "Elendsfirnis," literally, "wretched varnish."

Of 2,000 motors exported by the Bavarian motorworks, 800 were returned because of bad material. The Teckel works, which export Bosch pumps, have had a similar experience.

Factories Generally Work On Part-Time Basis.

THE FOREGOING, as said, are but a few of dozens of like instances. A list of factories which have had to discharge a considerable part of their workers and put the rest on short time because of a shortage of raw materials would require a column for itself. The leather industry is working at most 30 hours a week, the textile industry 24 hours. The silversmiths of Pforzheim are almost entirely idle because silver cannot be had even illegally. Dentists receive two grams (30.864 grains) of gold per month.

Despite the assertion of the Institute for Economic Research that there is no shortage of stocks in "the whole" economic structure, there is such shortage that even preparations for war suffer. The commission charged with inspecting marine materials refused at the end of May to approve the machinery furnished for a torpedo boat, since serious defects had developed on the testing stand, where the machines must show a higher efficiency than is required in active service.

An idea of how armaments are being rushed, of what disproportionate share of materials is being devoted to this end, is apparent when one considers the imports "more important than butter." Imports of caoutchouc were 49,000 metric tons in 1929, 82,000 tons in 1936. Consumption of mineral oils rose in the same period from 22.5 to 45 kilograms per capita. The production of aluminum rose from 33,000 to 95,000 tons, imports of iron ore from 16.8 to 18.5 million tons. Germany thus has far greater stocks of raw materials than ever before.

Germany's proportion of the world's industrial production is estimated at 11 per cent, her proportion of the production of armaments at over 30 per cent. Armaments took over 20 per cent of the people's total income in 1936.

Although budget figures are not made public, it is estimated that Germany's total debt has more than doubled in four years. It is reported that an English banker said recently to Dr. Schacht that a British government which did not make its budget public would be driven out.

"It is precisely the splendid thing about National Socialism," answered Schacht, "that it is forbidden to distrust the government."

There is ever more reason for free peoples to distrust that government.

Breaking Point

By Barnet Nover

Britain's Uncertain Moves.

"THERE IS A POINT," cables Felix Morley in a dispatch from London which appears elsewhere in The Post today, "beyond which the Chamberlain government will not be pushed" by Germany and Italy.

In the face of tensions in Europe which owe their origin in no small measure to the timorousness of the democracies, some scant comfort can be taken in that fact. Some day the men who direct British policy may decide they have gone far enough in humoring Germany. Some day they may decide that friendship with the Third Reich can only be had at too high a price. Some day the Nazi government may thumb its nose at Downing Street just once too often, and the breaking point of British patience shall have been reached. That day has apparently not yet dawned. Yet it may not be far off. There is a limit to everything.

• • • •

IN THE CLOSING years of the nineteenth century there was another Chamberlain holding high place in the British government. Unlike his son, Neville, Joseph Chamberlain never attained the premiership. But as colonial secretary he was nevertheless an important figure. When, therefore, he urged Germany, the most powerful military nation in Europe, to join forces with Great Britain, mistress of the seas, for the preservation of the peace of Europe, he spoke not only for himself, but for the government. He also spoke for a large section of British public opinion.

The wily gentleman in the Wilhelmstrasse listened to his proposals with interest. But with an obtuseness that has so often characterized German foreign policy from that day to this, they chose to regard Britain's offer of an alliance as a sign of weakness.

They believed they could capitalize that weakness. They saw Great Britain in conflict with Russia in the Far East and the Middle East, with France in the Sudan, with the Boers in South Africa. Great Britain, they decided, needed Germany far more than Germany needed Great Britain. There was no hurry to take up the Chamberlain bid; on the contrary, the longer the answer was put off, it was believed in Berlin, the more desperately anxious Great Britain would be to secure German co-operation and the higher the price London would have to pay.

• • • •

WHAT HAPPENED is history. The Boer War was fought and won by Great Britain, which, soon after peace had been made, proceeded to carry out so sensible a policy of appeasement in the conquered area that not many years later men like Jan Smuts, who had fought the British, did yeoman service for the empire. France quickly forgot the wounds of Fasnoda and, in 1904, eagerly agreed to establish an entente with Great Britain. Three years later Russia and Great Britain buried the hatchet.

From then on German leaders, forgetting the Reich's golden opportunity at the bend of the century, to cement Anglo-German friendship, began to complain of Germany's encirclement. But that encirclement was of their own making.

Now once again Germany is holding back from a Great Britain almost pathetically eager to live on terms of amity with the Third Reich. Indeed, sensing an immeditae advantage in working with Italy in a joint stand on Spain, Great Britain has been rebuffed. Now as in 1899 and 1901 the German calculation may be that Britain has no alternative but to seek German friendship. But this calculation may be as wrong now as it was then.

• • • •

FROM THE BRITISH point of view it must unquestionably be an ominous circumstance that, hard on the heels of the phony Leipzig "incident" the German fleet in the western Mediterranean has been strengthened. The British are exceedingly touchy both about naval matters and about the Mediterranean.

It is not an impossibility, therefore, that the German bluff may be called sooner than anyone suspects even though, as the debate in Parliament showed, the Chamberlain government is still eager to court the Third Reich. But it is an open question whether, short of a direct challenge to British power, the London government would not now as in the past consent to close its eyes to German and Italian action in Spain.

From a logical point of view the Nazi regime is unquestionably right in its calculations that its bluster and bellicosity have a real nuisance value, particularly when manifested in conjunction with Italy. This policy has paid large dividends in the past and now that France is in financial distress and a crisis of unknown magnitude is absorbing the attention of the Russian government, the feeling in Berlin and Rome may be that the policy can now pay even larger dividends.

• • • •

YET LOGIC is a poor guide in judging what Great Britain will or will not do. Indeed, the very fact that Great Britain, together with France, has now agreed to take over the German and Italian patrol zones marks a fundamental change in the British position on the Spanish war.

Seemingly this action arises out of a dire necessity which cannot be met in any other way. Great Britain, certainly does not want to add to its patrol obligations. But if it does so, whatever the reason, it will be thoroughly committed to make the nonintervention agreement a reality. Certainly the presence of British or French ships in the waters off Barcelona and Valencia will make another Almeria bombardment by the Fascist powers inexpedient.

By illogical stages and even while denying that it is doing anything of the sort, Great Britain may now force itself in a position to redress the balance in Spain flagrantly upset by the Fascist powers without protest from Great Britain. Once again Germany may have overplayed its hand.

American Best-Seller

By William Lyon Phelps

"Midnight On The Desert."

This new book, now a best seller in the United States, was written by the British novelist, J. B. Priestley, who made a reputation by his first important novel, "The Good Companions," which still, in the opinion of the public, remains his best. He followed that with "Angel Pavement," a long novel of London (river and streets), but while that book contained some admirable descriptions, especially the metropolitan snowstorm, the story and the characters were lacking in importance.

• • • •

Mr. Priestley had the ill fortune to run into a "Fatal Interview" on a visit to America, which quite naturally still rankles in his mind. I cannot myself see why on earth Americans ask European visitors what they think of us, of American women, etc. What possible value or importance can their opinions on such themes—if they are foolish enough to express any—have for us? What we should ask them is for information on their own country.

Well, he came over again, anyhow, and with his family spent a winter in our vast Southwest, and his midnight meditations, beautifully written, are in this new book called "Midnight on the Desert." The best parts of it are his speculations and thoughts on matters of universal interest; the least important chapters are those devoted to American customs and manners.

• • • •

Men and women are so constituted that they love their own country best—a fortunate thing. I felt not only sympathy with, but admiration for, Mr. Priestley when he said in some periodical that he would rather live in his suburb of London than in Florence or in any other more beautiful setting. Good for him! That is the way I feel. I had rather live in New Haven, Connecticut, Huron City, Michigan, and Augusta, Georgia, than in any more wonderful European land.

East, West,
Home's best.

Mr. Priestley is a good fellow, and when he has completely forgotten that interview and that play, he will be happy in his American excursions, which I hope may be frequent and prolonged.

Majority Held For Modified Court Measure

Backers Claim Sufficient Senate Votes to Pass Compromise.

By the Associated Press.

Administration leaders flatly claimed enough Senate votes yesterday to approve a compromise on the Roosevelt court bill.

Opposition leaders, however, said they would permit none of the compromises now being discussed to come to a vote. They said there was a good chance for the entire issue to be sidetracked.

Leaders of the Administration fight said they had a minimum of 54 votes lined up for a compromise authorizing the President to appoint new justices to the Supreme Court at the rate of one a year for each incumbent over 75.

Concede Filibuster.

They conceded they would face a filibuster on such a proposition, but declared they would be able to break it.

Private conversations of leaders on both sides indicated the first test would come on a motion to postpone consideration indefinitely or send the bill back to the Judiciary Committee.

Administration forces claimed enough votes to defeat such a motion. Opposition leaders said the result would be exceedingly close and that no one could forecast the outcome.

Scheduled Next Week.

The court bill is scheduled to come up late next week. Both sides were wondering whether the weekend conferencs with President Roosvelt at Jefferson Island would make any changes in the line-up.

Some veteran Senators forecast that the ultimate outcome would be adoption of a compromise even further from the original bill than the one now being discussed.

They suggested the proposal for one additional justice a year might be passed, with a clause holding up its operation for a year or two. At the same time, they said, Congress could propose a constitutional amendment for compulsory retirement at 75 years of age.

33 of Capital Club Attend Conference

Thirty-three members of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club left yesterday for Gatlinburg, Tenn., to attend the Eighth Appalachian Trail Conference today, tomorrow and Monday.

The conference will be devoted to discussions of trail and hiking matters, in which Washingtonians have a prominent part. Myron H. Avery, of the United States Maritime Commission, is chairman of the conference. The secretary is Miss Harlean James, of Washington. The assistant secretaries are Mrs. Mary Josephine Williams and Miss Marion Park, both of Washington. Dr. J. F. Schairer, of the Carnegie Geophysical Laboratory of Washington, will report on the trail through Maryland and Virginia.

At the banquet Saturday evening, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, will speak. Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier, of the Brookings Institution, will give a demonstration of trail sign making. Egbert H. Walker, of the Smithsonian Institution, will direct the discussion of map making by amateurs. Warren N. Watson, of Washington, will tell of ancient firemaking methods and their modern application. Vivian Robb, of Washington, chairman of the photographic collection, will announce winners in the national contest. Dr. H. C. Bryant, assistant director of the National Park Service, and Edward B. Ballard, of the National resources committee, will participate in the discussion of the place of the Appalachian Trail in planned recreation. Among other members of the Washington Club attending are William B. Arnold, state's attorney of Lancaster, Pa., and Jean Stephenson, national chairman, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Jewish Delegates Ready for Parley

Eighty delegates from Washington, the largest number ever to represent the Capital, will attend the national Brith Sholom convention at Atlantic City, June 27. Bernard Danzansky, who organized the George Washington lodge, local chapter of the order, 23 years ago, will head the Washington contingent. En route to Atlantic City, the Washington delegation will be joined at Baltimore by more than 700 delegates from that city and Norfolk.

Legislator's Son Is Facing Inquiry For Illegal Flight

Edward Somers, 12-year-old son of Representative Andrew L. Somers, of Brooklyn, seems destined to remain on the ground at least until he is 16. Bureau of Air Commerce officials stated, after being informed of Somers' solo flight over Floyd Bennett Field Tuesday, that they were going to do some investigating because persons under 16 are forbidden to fly airplanes.

Bureau of Air Commerce officials yesterday intimated Edward's license would be withdrawn if investigation showed his age had been falsified.

Public Demand For U.S.-Owned Banks Forecast

Another Crisis May Force Change in System, Davis Says.

By the Associated Press.

Glacier National Park, Mont., June 25.—Chester C. Davis, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, gave bankers a broad hint today the public may demand Government ownership and operation of banking in event of another bank crisis.

Addressing the Montana Bankers Association, he said that in the present banking situation "there is enough of danger from the viewpoint of private bank ownership and operation to challenge the bankers to insist on and lead in progressive and intelligent reform."

"If another crisis finds the American banking system disorganized and ineffective," he added, "the American citizenry, inherently conservative though it undoubtedly is, may, nevertheless, seize a short cut."

Davis is the former chief of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Discussing economic conditions generally, he said many persons apparently have the "delusion" that issuance of vast quantities of new currency would quicken the business pulse.

He pointed out that money in circulation reached $7,500,000,000 in the depression month of March, 1933, and said that regardless of the amount of currency only that portion which is used for business purposes affects the domestic economy.

WPA Artists Hit Cut in Personnel

A delegation of 62 workers from arts projects in New York and Philadelphia invaded WPA headquarters at 1734 New York avenue northwest yesterday to demand exemption from contemplated cuts in personnel and establishment of an appeal board to rule on dismissals.

In the absence of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, the visitors presented their demands to Aubrey Williams through their spokesman, Chet La More, who called the budget reduction an act of "mass murder by the Roosevelt Administration."

Williams told them the only way it would be possible to grant their group exemption from cuts would be to take jobs away from some other area. He also questioned the value of an appeals board, saying that it was likely to become simply a rubber-stamp group. They arranged to confer with Williams again this morning.

Il Duce Branches Out In Search for Iron

Rome, June 25 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini turned from Italian park fences to Austrian scrap heaps today in his campaign for more iron and steel for Italy's armaments.

The Italian cabinet approved a decree providing duty-free importation from Austria of 2,755,000 tons of scrap iron, pig iron and iron bars. Park fences and grillwork on government buildings began to disappear throughout Italy yesterday to be turned into arms.

Mooney Now Gardener.

San Quentin, Calif., June 25 (AP).—Tom Mooney has been promoted from peeling potatoes to growing them. He got a job as gardener after he returned from the San Francisco County jail, where he spent a year during his habeas corpus appeal for freedom from life sentence for a 1916 Preparedness Day bombing.

Tenancy Bills To Be Rushed In Both Houses

Lower Chamber Probably to Begin Consideration on Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Administration leaders decided yesterday to rush farm tenancy legislation through both houses of Congress early next week, before the Senate plunges into debate over the President's court bill.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, co-author of the tenancy measure, said he feared it would be lost in the end-of-session scramble for adjournment if it is not passed quickly.

The House probably will begin consideration Monday of the Bankhead-Jones bill, designed to check the increase in farm tenancy by providing cheap Government loans to finance land purchases.

Quick Enactment Forecast.

Bankhead said leaders had agreed to bring the measure to the Senate floor Wednesday or Thursday, if it is approved by the House.

He predicted speedy enactment, since a more far-reaching tenancy bill was passed by the Senate two years ago. The measure which Senators approved then died in the House Agriculture Committee.

Measures Differ.

The legislation now awaiting action calls for a $10,000,000 appropriation this fiscal year; $25,000,000 the next, and $50,000,000 annually thereafter. Administration spokesmen have agreed with farm leaders that the initial sum will be too small to make much headway toward tenancy reform, but they argue any larger amount would delay balancing of the budget.

While the House bill provides that the money shall be lent to worthy tenants to buy land approved by local committees, the Senate measure proposes a Federal agency—the Farmers Home Corporation—to buy land for resale to tenants.

Interested Senators said privately this difference probably will be ironed out in conference without much difficulty.

Embassy to Fete 3 Soviet Flier

The three Soviet fliers who completed a nonstop polar flight from Moscow to Vancouver, Wash., will arrive at the Union Station Sunday at 7:50 a. m.

Valery Chekalov, Georgi Baidukov and Alexander Belaikov, the trio, will remain in Washington several days as guests of the Soviet embassy. On Monday they are expected to be presented to President Roosevelt by Soviet Ambassador Troyanovsky.

A luncheon is being arranged for the fliers by the National Press Club and the Overseas Writers Club.

New England Dairymen Back U. S. Milk Control

Concord, N. H., June 25 (AP).—A marketing conference of dairymen from four New England States today unanimously adopted a resolution approving Federal control of milk sales. Farm spokesmen attending the conference said reinstatement of Federal control would mean $2,500,000 more annually to northern New England dairymen.

Britain Backs Neutral Stand In Spanish War

Non-Intervention Policy Reaffirmed Despite Protests.

preserve British prestige. Any fish can keep cool."

While Laborites and Liberals combined to attack the government, their suggested solutions follow different lines. The Labor Party wants the abolition of the non-intervention committee and the submission of the whole Spanish problem to the League of Nations under Article II of the Covenant. By this technique, proof of any further aggression on the part of Germany or Italy would be regarded as an act of war calling for military sanctions against one or both dictatorships.

The Liberal Party, in general, disapproves of this suggestion as impractical in view of the present weakness of the League. Their belief, as voiced by Sir Archibald Sinclair in today's debate, is that the return of Germany to the League is essential to give a firm foundation of peace. There is little support for Lloyd George's suggestion that both sides in Spain be allowed to import war materials to the limit of their resources.

Spokesmen for the government capitalized the absence of any clear-cut alternative policy on the part of the opposition. But there are many intimations that rearmed Britain does not intend to permit Germany and Italy to proceed at will. The refusal of the German request for a four-power naval demonstration off Valencia was unequivocal and had the unanimous support of the British nation. Evidently there is a point beyond which the Chamberlain government will not be pushed, in spite of its patience toward Germany.

Overshot Mark.

Informed opinion in London holds that Germany has overshot the mark in connection with the Leipzig incident. It is pointed out that the protests of the Third Reich coincided with the development of a grave internal situation in Soviet Russia and a change in government in France. It is believed Berlin's intention was to seize the opportunity for a demonstration against the Valencia regime which would further weaken the latter's morale following the fall of Bilbao. If so, the bluff has been called, though there is admittedly much uncertainty as to Germany's next step.

In two respects the withdrawal by Germany and Italy from the joint naval supervision scheme has weakened the structure of peace. It constitutes a serious setback to the development of better Anglo-German relations even though this aspect has been whitewashed by the government in today's debate. And it renews the uncertainty though to have been eliminated over the localization of the Spanish conflict.

The essential instability of Europe today is demonstrated by the way the deterioration of Russia and the political uncertainty in France can immediately be reflected in incidents detrimental to peace. The British conviction is that, while Germany does not want war, Berlin fully recognizes its nuisance value and proposes to capitalize thereon. Such a policy does not hold promise of any immediate pacification of Europe.

Not Peace at Any Price.

London, June 25 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden wound up a House of Commons debate on the Spanish crisis today with a warning that although Britain intends to exert every effort to keep the peace in Europe this does not mean peace at any price.

After conclusion of the "full dress" debate it was authoritatively disclosed Great Britain and France have decided to propose use of their own warships to close the gap in the "hands off Spain" patrol caused by the withdrawal of Italy and Germany.

In the face of vigorous opposition charges that the policy of non-intervention which Britain sponsors has failed, both Eden and Chamberlain told the commons the policy would be given further trial.

Government Backed.

"I beg the house to believe the government will pursue the policy best calculated to preserve peace for Europe and this generation," said Eden.

After he ended, the house voted, 157 to 86, in support of the government.

Chamberlain, opening the debate, argued for "cool heads" and avoidance of doing or saying anything "to precipitate the disaster everyone wants to avoid." He likened Europe's present situation to that in high mountains where "a sudden exclamation may start an avalanche."

"If we can exercise patience, caution and restraint we may yet be able to save the peace of Europe," Chamberlain declared.

Lloyd George, wartime premier and veteran of parliamentary conflict, seized on the "keep cool" admonition.

"Any fish can keep a cool head," he declared, adding that what Britain needed now was "stout hearts."

Chamberlain Praised.

Berlin, June 25 (AP).—German officials today praised the "conciliatory spirit" of British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's reference to German moderation over the Leipzig incident.

Rome, June 25 (U.P.).—Roberto Farinacci, member of Premier Benito Mussolini's Fascist grand council, tonight advised Italy to break off relations with Great Britain and France, and warned that the Italians are ready for war.

Farinacci, fiery early-day Blackshirt who was talked of a few years ago as Mussolini's successor, advised the rupture of diplomatic relations in an editorial in his Cremona newspaper, Regime Fascista.

"Confronted by a resolute and strong tone from Italy and Germany, Eden and Blum will, as usual, appear as lambs in lions' skins," he said.

Franco Reports Gains.

Martin Dies, of Texas, its president.

The President was subjected to relentless questioning by Dies, and although he was noncommittal on most questions, including:

"Do you propose to do only those things which will promote your interests for a third term?"—members decided he had passed the test.

On motion of Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, he was admitted, amid cheering.

Other posers put to the President by Dies were:

"Do you promise to do all you can for the farmer, the independent merchant and labor, even if it defeats you for election?

"Do you agree never to be consistent, and understand that if you ever are consistent you must forfeit your membership?

"Do you agree not to put any controversial legislation up to this session of Congress?

Jibes at Copeland.

"Do you promise to favor every appropriation bill and oppose every tax measure?"

Only to the last question did the President laugh his assent, quipping: "I've learned how to do that from Dr. (Senator Royal S.) Copeland."

Copeland, whose suggested candidacy and possible White House indorsement for the New York mayoralty recently drew a press conference "Ha, ha," from the President, did not attend the picnic.

Before taking membership in Dies' "Demagogue Club," the President asked if it was "Maverick's organization of House Progressives." Dies corrected him. He declared the Maverick group was a C. I. O. unit, while the "Demagogues" believed in craft labor.

With one exception, members insisted there had been no serious talk on the island and the event was nothing more than "a good old-fashioned political picnic."

The exception was Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, who had rallied a progressive House following to inform the President that his group was willing to keep Congress in session until January if necessary to vote on all of his major measures. Maverick had said he was going down to talk "cold turkey" and tonight he said he had talked it.

"The President said we are going through," announced Maverick, as he hopped off his boat at the Annapolis dock.

"Going through with what?" asked a reporter.

"With all of the things he said he would," declared Maverick.

"Did he mean this session?" the newsman asked.

"The President is smart enough," said Maverick, and declined to discuss it further. He said he had "specifically mentioned the court plan" in his conversation with the President.

Others Deny Serious Talk.

All of the others were virtually unanimous in insisting there had been no serious talk with the President, and one said: "The situation hasn't been changed a bit by all of this. But we all had a good time."

If the President failed to "talk shop," some of his Cabinet and Government officials were less reticent. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had a long conversation with Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia. Whether they patched up old differences could not be determined, but it is known that they broached the agriculture marketing bill and the Virginia resettlement projects, neither of which exactly meets Byrd's approval.

Other Government officials who chatted about legislation with the members included Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Attorney General Cummings and WPA Administrator Hopkins. Acting Secretary of the Interior West was the center of a little group on the second floor of the clubhouse.

Kenney Pushes Lottery.

Representative Edward A. Kenney, of New Jersey, whose national lottery bill is a hobby, carried a bundle of literature about it to the island and made the President a short speech. Mr. Roosevelt was noncommittal.

Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, jolted reporters when he announced, "We discussed a third term." But he swiftly added: "For two Senators up for re-election."

In the shade of a small tree near the shore of the island, the President passed most of the afternoon, almost continuously surrounded by a bevy of Senators and Representatives. He was comfortably attired in linen trousers, and white shirt, open at the neck.

Bailey, one of those Senators who has been on the other side of the Administration fence on the court plan and other Administration issues, talked nearly an hour with the President. Later he insisted the court plan had not been broached, and his conversation had merely been a congenial one of a social nature.

Five Senate opponents of the President's court bill had attended the outing in a group, and returned to Washington tonight in the same automobile. The group, besides Bailey, included Senators Byrd, of Virginia; Adams, of Colorado; Clark, of Missouri, and Van Nuys.

Dieterich Fears Byrd.

Senator William H. Dietrich, of Illinois, vigorous court plan proponent, suspiciously eyed Byrd and Clark, court plan opponents, when they invited him to go for a walk.

"If I don't come back, you will know why," he shouted to friends as he left with the duo. Dieterich balked when a patch of poison ivy hove in view. He swore Byrd and Clark planned to toss him in it.

"We're all for the court bill now," jested Clark facetiously as he left the boat last night at Annapolis.

Outlook Held Unchanged.

But Senator Van Nuys was more serious.

"It didn't change the outlook on the court bill one iota," said the Indiana Senator. "I didn't hear it discussed, except among a few members. We all had a good time, and that was the net result of the outing. It gave House members and Senators a chance to get acquainted."

Occasion was the first of a series of three-day Democratic rallies round the President at week-end outings separately arranged by the Jefferson Island Club. About 120 members of the House and Senate, all shades of the Democratic rainbow, and a scattering of Cabinet officials and heads of independent agencies, weighed anchor promptly at 9 a. m., in trim little Navy patrol boats.

The President had departed the night previous, aboard his official yacht, the U. S. S. Potomac. Members began leaving the island about 4:30 p. m., and shortly after 6 the last boat had docked at the Academy wharf.

Boats Loaded to Scuppers."

After a shore luncheon of potato salad, cold meats, crabs and beer, members sought out shady nooks on the island, or gathered in grounds near the clubhouse for a songfest. Popular ballads. "The 'Old G. O. P.,' she ain't what she used to be," "Happy Days Are Here Again" and others of a more informal nature, including "My Sweetheart's a Mule in the Mines," were rendered, with harmony effects. Representative Tom Cullen, of New York, gave a solo repertoire of Irish ballads.

The first squadron of the little 75-foot boats, used for training middies, left Annapolis for the island at 9, loaded to the scuppers with their Democratic freight. The boats were nameless except for cryptic Navy markings—the YP 21, YP 55, YP 59 and YP 60.

Three members were late. Loaded, along with supplies for the outing, aboard the party food boat, they shoved off at 1 p. m.

Farley Arrives Breathless.

Still the party wasn't complete. The YP 57 was left behind for Postmaster General James A. Farley, who arrived a bit breathless at 1:15, after a swift trip from Maine. Farley was lugging a big bundle of newspapers. He said he was going to catch up on his reading. Sheltered by a little awning, Farley sat alone and in state on the deck, as his boat pulled out.

Senate Majority Leader Robinson, President of the Jefferson Islands Club, was in a picnic mood.

He talked in staccato. "A bright day," he said. "Good company. A fine outing. Lots of conversation."

Acting Secretary of Interior Charles West, contact man at the Capitol, was equally gleeful.

"Don't you think the country will be under control by Sunday noon?" he smilingly asked reporters.

West carried a large suitcase.

Steagall Opens Collar.

Representative Maverick bore a large Manila envelope. It was filled with "Roosevelt for President" buttons, of the 1936 vintage.

"If I can find any Roosevelt supporters, I am going to put one of these on them," he said.

It required little time for members to unbend in informal surroundings. Representative Henry Steagall, of Alabama, immediately tore open his high stiff collar.

"There is no point in my being here, except as a courtesy," he muttered. "I have always been on good terms with the President."

There was naval precision on the roped-off academy dock as members took boat. A double checkoff was made on the credentials of members. Joseph Sinnott, House doorkeeper, was on hand to examine invitations of members, and as each went aboard, they were registed by Navy officers.

Representative Scott Lucas, of Illinois, hesitated after Sinnott had glanced at his invitation.

"Now that I've answered the roll call, can't I go back?" he blandly inquired.

But he clambered aboard.

of a number of well-oiled elbows moving up and down with piston-like precision, and but one sound, that of the second chorus to "My Sweetheart's a Mule in the Mine."

President's Laugh Booms.

Occasionally the booming laugh of the President rang out across the water. He sat at lunch with a small group under a tree on the lawn before the two-story white-frame clubhouse at nearly the tip of the island's harbor site. Behind him under a great spreading tree sat a larger gathering of the members consuming cold ham, crab, cheese, salads, apple pie and iced tea.

Senators accustomed to staring with glazed eyes at the traditional bean soup on the Senate restaurant menu six days a week appeared to fall on this menu in about the same way a pack of Siberian wolves is said to receive someone tossed overboard from a speeding sleigh.

On the veranda of the clubhouse and in the long clubroom were more members. The servants scuttled back and forth from the kitchen wing and from a small side-house, identical in style.

Behind the clubhouse a huge brown Army tent had been erected to shelter the picnickers in the event of rain. Back of that ranged the thick forest that covers the three curving islands, the trees marching right down to the water on nearly every shore.

From a distance the purple islands seem to float indeterminately at about the point that the blue bay-waters melt into the pale misty sky, like three quivering purple streaks laid softly on the blue glassy waters.

Variously Attired.

From the wharf the milling Congressmen could be plainly seen, attired in the modes of personal taste, some in white suits, some in sportive dress, and some in hard hats and wool suits and bump-toed shoes.

From time to time the head of the Secret Service, Col. Edmund W. Starling, pantomimed a vigorous "thumbs down" in our direction. From time to time we backed off a little farther. In the course of a little while we came to the end of the wharf, and fearing sharks, re-entered our boat.

There were 15 Congressmen, however, with no fear of sharks or anything else this afternoon. This merry group, who can be readily identified today by their lobster-tint complexions, made their way to the next island, entirely nude, with many a lightsome jest and frolicsome laugh, punctuated only occasionally by a hearty oath as their pale feet encountered stones.

Fifteen Take Swim.

There they bathed in the clear green waters of Jefferson Narrows, the rather curious shapes of some of them standing out startlingly clear against the foliage.

The four submarine chasers, the five yard patrol, or Y-P boats, and the two yachts, unable to approach the island, brought into play innumerable cutters and speedboats. These sped back and forth throughout the day bringing fresh Congressmen and carrying away the more exhausted members, the latter being those unable to endure the fresh air and invigorating life of the island.

"Ice Water" Is Fine.

"The boys drank a little ice water," smiled Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, Senator from Arkansas. Another added: "The ice water on Jefferson Island is the finest I ever laid lip to. There is a certain something about it which is hard to describe."

Although there are sets of golf clubs and croquet mallets and two kinds of skeet shooting on the island, no one seemed to be keen about the more active types of picnicking.

"There ain't no fish hereabouts," said the boatman. "Let's sheer off and fish some place where they is fish."

"Son, you know nothing of the newspaper business," we said. "Our orders are to fish right here."

At this point the photographer caught a somewhat immature eel, the first and only catch. Our duty done, we hove up anchor for the nearest drugstore's sunburn-lotion counter, where we found several Congressmen in quest of the same thing.

Kansans Convict 2 Of Killing G-Man

Topeka, Kans., June 25 (AP).—Robert J. Suhay and Glen Applegate, paroled New York convicts, were convicted by a jury in the United States District Court here tonight of the murder of Federal Agent Wimberly W. Baker in a gun battle last April 16. The death penalty is mandatory.

It required the jurors, half of them farmers, less than four hours to find the two gunmen shot Baker in the postoffice here because he sought to arrest them for a bank holdup in New York.

Philip Murray Calls Tom Girdler a 'Nit-Wit'

Pittsburgh, June 25 (AP).—Chairman Philip Murray, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, called Tom Girdler a "nit-wit" today, in reply to the Republic Steel Corporation chairman's assertion that Murray was a "liar."

"I do not see any reason for engaging in a public controversy with a nit-wit," Murray said.

Marshal Semion Budienny, chief of the Moscow garrison, kept close to Stalin at all times, but the latter moved about freely in close proximity to more then 1,000 persons allowed near the official stand.

When the adventures alighted from their planes open, flower-draped cars carried them to where Stalin and others awaited them.

However, instead of mounting the government stand they swarmed into one adjoining, where their relatives were grouped. There the returning heroes seized wives, children, mothers and others in the most demonstrative meeting most foreign correspondents had seen in Russia.

Dictator Hugs Children.

Stalin entered into the spirit of the affair. Some of the fliers took their children into the official stand, where Stalin picked up several, hugged them and posed for photographs with them.

Vice Premier Vlas Chubar asserted difficulties of the polar adventure not only were due to backwardness of technique at the time of the revolution, "but also to German and Japanese Fascists, who together with their Trotskyist agents and traitors, tried to hinder our progress."

"But we have crushed them mercilessly. We know the enemy is preparing to attack us but after the destruction of Tukhachevsky, Yakir and company, we know our people who have created heroes such as we are welcoming will more than ever be devoted to the cause."

Marshal Michail N. Tukhachevsky and Comdr. I. E. Yakir were among a group of army officers executed June 13 for treason.)

Schmidt said the flight "demonstrated the security and safety of a route to America."

He added work at the North Pole would be continued until "it has given up its full use to humanity."

'Canary Fever' Brings Consul's Wife to Capital From Islands

Mrs. Winfield Scott Being Treated for Obscure Tropical Disease, Recovering Slowly; Husband, an Alexandrian, Remains at Post.

After a journey of more than 4,500 miles, Mrs. Winfield H. Scott, wife of the American Consul in the Canary Islands, has arrived in Washington, The Post learned last night, to be treated for a malady known as "canary fever."

She is staying at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Deemer, 213 Maple avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and is taking treatments from a Washington physician.

A member of the family explained last night canary fever is not contagious. Mrs. Scott, it was added, has been suffering from it since last November, but now appears to be improving steadily.

The effect of the malady, this member of the family said, is something like that of malaria, producing a weakening of the muscles and a general lethargy.

Public Health Service officials and other experts on tropical ills said they were not familiar with canary fever—at least, by that name.

"I presume," said Dr. Charles Armstrong, of the Public Health Service, "that the term canary fever is a local designation."

The fever has nothing to do with canary birds. For that matter, the Canary Islands were not named for birds, but for dogs. Great packs of wild dogs were found on the islands by the discoverers, who gave the islands the name "Canaria Insula,' 'or "Isle of Dogs," in Latin, which became "Canary Islands" in English.

Unable to shake off the fever in the islands, Mrs. Scott started her long journey homeward by taking a British tourist ship to England. There she boarded the S. S. Manhattan, which brought her to New York.

Husband in Islands.

Her husband remained in Teneriffe, the capital of the Canaries, located about 60 miles west of the African coast. The islands are owned by Spain, and are at present controlled by Fascist Gen. Franco.

Consul Scott, born at Alexandria 45 years ago, is a descendant of Gen. Winfield Scott, hero of the Mexican War. He attended Business High School and Georgetown University and served as a lieutenant in the World War.

He married Mrs. Scott, the former Jeanette Bealle, May 21, 1918. They have been in many parts of the world since he entered the consular service, including Egypt, India, Honduras, England, Rumania and Burma.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's original pass was bad, in my opinion. The solidity of the heart suit and his general distribution should have made a one heart opening highly enticing. South's double of two heart was not to be criticized, even though in actual fact East could have made three hearts. South was right in thinking that if North could stand the double, two hearts would be defeated whereas there would be no game for North-South. North, however, could not stand the double and acted properly in taking it out, although there was a grave question in his mind as to whether he should bid two spades or three diamonds.

West decided that he must prevent a cross-ruff, since the about-to-be dummy was obviously short of hearts, and opened a low diamond. This was sound policy. Dummy's nine held the trick, and a singleton heart lost to East's Jack. East made the best return he could, namely, a low club which declarer won in his own hand. A heart ruff followed, and a low spade was led to declarer's nine-spot.

Since East had virtually marked himself by his bid and his play with the Ace, King-Queen and Jack of hearts and had not opened the bidding, the Ace of spades, of course, was absolutely marked in West's hand. West won with the Ace and, since he could count that declarer was now down to the Ace, King, Queen of trumps, led another diamond to reduce dummy's ruffing power further. Declarer won and cashed the spade King, then led another heart.

This is where West made the fatal error of conserving his trumps. His discard of a spade was playing right into the declarer's hand. Dummy's last trump ruffed the heart and after that, of course, there was no way to prevent declarer from cashing the club Ace and his two high diamonds for a total of nine tricks.

Had West remained alert to the count of declarer's tricks already home and in prospect he would have seen that it was vital to stop another heart ruff in the dummy.

But interesting stories and adventures are assured Post readers. For already McCarthy has visited "Bloody" Harlan County, Kentucky. He has met A. T. Pace, who was mayor of Herrin, Ill., at the time of the "Herrin Massacre." Monday his first article appears. Read this series from the start and live with McCarthy as he sends home this daily "letter" of his adventures. You can never tell, he may visit your own home town and write about the very persons you know.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After 2 Years' Correspondence, Boy Proposes; Can't See Girl for 2 Years More; Should She Accept?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18, living here with an uncle and aunt who put me through business school. A young man of 22, a cousin of mine by adoption, who lives 1,000 miles away, has asked me to marry him. We met two years ago when he came here to visit, became interested in each other and developed that interest by correspondence. He has no end of ambition and is working his way through school. He has finished his third year and will teach until he can go back and win his degree. He is rather serious minded, quiet and sensible. We are congenial and I know we could be happy together, although no one else thinks so. My aunt is distressed at the idea. We won't see each other for another two years, so do you think we can continue to keep our love alive by correspondence, if I do give him a definite and binding "yes?" I am sure I love him.

• • • •

This is not the first time I have been in love. I have been going with another boy, who lives 200 miles away, off and on for several years. At one time I cared a lot for him, but he was without ambition and I lost interest. He still says he loves me but goes out with other girls and, according to his letters, "has a lovely time" with them. He is just about to enter college after spending two years loafing, as he wasn't willing to work his way through.

• • • •

He doesn't drink to excess, but does indulge, and sometimes I have been ashamed of him. We can't get along peacefully for two minutes—always fussing and fighting. But he says it would be "very silly" for us to marry anyone else. He has hinted at premarital relations and will not leave me alone when I am with him, although he knows I dislike that sort of thing very much. I believe he is not worth my time and I think you will agree with me.

• • • •

He is coming here for the Boy Scouts celebration. Before then I want yor advice as to whether to pledge myself to marry the other boy; and if so, what to tell this one. Should I say I have been misleading him the past two years Or should I say that I once loved him, but that he killed my love. I was terribly fond of him at one time.

UNCERTAIN.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Your cousin-by-adoption seems to be a very fine fellow; a highly eligible matrimonial prospect, and you do credit to your judgment in loving him; but I question the wisdom of becoming "bindingly" engaged to him just now, all things considered. I think it would be wiser to both to have an affectionate understanding that marriage will be brought up again for discussion at the end of two years, providing each still cares as much for the other at the end of that time. In the meantime, each should develope every congenial, stimulating and inspiring social contact which comes his way. If your mutual devotion is well-substantiated—and I daresay it is—such an arrangement will be just as effective as a formal engagement and will, in addition, leave each conscience-free to acquire invaluable social experience of a kind which can only be found in continuous association with one's contemporaries of both sexes.

• • • •

The other youth seems to be a definitely second-rate sort of person, and your cousin-by-adoption has made a real contribution to your welfare through showing him up in his true light. Tell him you are tentatively engaged to marry the Westerner and are waiting only until his education is finished before making marriage plans. Tell him you realize now, in the light of your devotion to the boy you expect to marry, that you never really loved him, but were only "in love with love." Tell him it's possible you might have loved him, if his actions throughout had not been so consistently disappointing, but that the other boy, fortunately, through being just himself, has given you back many of the ideals which you seemed to lose sight of in associating with him.

M. H.

Another Shopper's Story.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Peter Pan" told her story about looking for a hat in Washington. Now, I'll tell mine. I went to get a hat. The salesgirl put a small frying pan on my head, then backed off and said, "Oh, how lovely you look." Gosh, when I looked in the mirror, what I saw there wouldn't have been recognized by my own mother. I am nearing 40, am not so hard to look at, and don't intend to look like a freak in a hat only suited to a flapper. Neither will I wear the sort my grandmother would.

• • • •

As for "Shop Keeper," let me tell him that I am one person who doesn't "look like hell," for the simple reason that I have not bought a hat this summer and I do not expect to get one. I really don't see why women need hats, anyway. Let them fix their hair attractively and go on. Give the poor shopkeepers a rest, so that when you enter their stores and come out again without buying a hat, you won't have to pray for your soul for hours. The customer who doesn't take the advice of the saleslgirl that she looks "grand" gets "hell cussed out" of her as soon as she leaves the shop.

HATLESS.

Tomorrow's Problem.

After tentatively accepting young man's proposal of marriage, 16-year-old girl instructs him neither to write to nor call upon her until she says the word. He waits a month and hears no word, then telephones her mother, who says the girl doesn't seem to be giving him a thought. He wants to know what makes her act that way. His question will be answered Sunday.

Let Men Cook in Summer

When the wife and children go away for the summer is when a man has the kitchen to himself. Here a genius may be uncovered, for what man doesn't at least like to mix up summer salads and appetizers, if not more substantial food?

Men Are Enterprising Cooks If Given Free Hand in Kitchen

Washingtonian Wins National Contest With Recipe for Sardine Canapes; Other Concoctions Are Offered for Masculine Tastes.

By Rebekah Blake.

When a wife is away a man is bound to play in the kitchen. It's a woman's world in this meal-planning business for the most part, but the beginning of the 1937 summer bachelor season will probably uncover in many a household, all unbeknown to the hostess, a genius who has been harboring there in disguise. The man of that house, beneath his mild exterior, is really itching to get a spoon in his hand, an apron around his vest and to go experimenting in the rougher fields of culinary combat.

An inexperienced, though ambitious, man cook might not be able to whip up a creditable Irish stew, but give him a free hand with the appetizer ingredients of salad fixings and ten to one he will produce some combinations inspired enough to make first-page news in any circle of guests. A monthly magazine recently went on a man hunt to discover the best men cooks in America and what recipes or menus that made them the bosses of their kitchens—for awhile at least. C. V. Beatty, jr., 407 Concord avenue northwest, Washington, D. C., was selected as one of the outstanding men cooks among the magazine's subscribers.

Sardine Canape Recipe.

Here is Mr. Beatty's recipe for Southern sardine canapes, which has given him equal rights in his kitchen:

⅔ cup mustard sardines
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon salad dressing
1½ tablespoons catsup
2 teaspoons minced onion
Salt and pepper
Butter crackers
Paprika

Thoroughly mash sardines and add Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, salad dressing, catsup, onion, salt and pepper. Chill and spread on crackers or thin rounds of toast. Sprinkle with paprika. Makes 25 canapes.

Here is another distinctly masculine concoction, for instance, that is a true find as an appetite-teaser. Cream cheese, chives and mushroom sauce — mixed to the taste — and served on crisp crackers. It's all any party needs to start off to great heights.

4 packages cream cheese
2 teaspoons chopped chives
2 tablespoons mushroom sauce
2 teaspoons paprika
Salt to taste

Blend all ingredients well. Chop thoroughly. The spread is improved if permitted to stand overnight before serving.

Men like to make salads and dislike washing dishes. A varied salad plate is the best way to get around both of these ideas at once. With all of the meal arranged on the dinner plates, serving dishes are eliminated from the dish washing and pans aren't necessary for preparations.

Stuffed Peppers Interesting.

Stuffed peppers give an interesting color note and suppose you use a pepper case for the center of interest of the luncheon plate. Arrange lettuce on the plate and in the center place the pepper half. Fill the pepper with some favorite fish, such as canned shrimp, salmon, tuna or crab. Do not mix the fish with anything. Just place big pieces of it in the shell and then over it pour some well seasoned French dressing, or have a section of lemon beside it to be used instead of the dressing.

Radiating from the center pepper shell arrange mounds of food, such as asparagus tips, while green beans, sliced beats, sections of tomatoes, sliced cucumbers and possibly a radish rose for the final touch of color. Season the vegetables with French dressing and pass mayonnaise for those who wish it. Some cavier added to the mayonnaise is a festive touch, and some extra prepared mustard added to it is good too.

A plate of this type is substantial and is easily prepared, though it may sound complicated. Chillled canned vegetables may be used if fresh ones are not convenient.

Steak is another dish that men excel in making. They are especially fond of highly seasoned steaks and make them accordingly. This De luxe Steak is one that any man will relish if he is allowed to make it for himself.

4 portions veal or beefsteak
Flour, salt, pepper
1 cup chopped or sliced ripe olives
3 teaspoons chili powder

Roll meat in flour, sprinkle with salt and pepper and fry to desired doneness; remove from pan. Combine olives and chili powder and saute in fat to which meat was cooked. Serve immediately over steaks. Serves four.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Appendicitis Treatment.

Yesterday we said that in the campaign to educate the public in order to try to reduce the mortality of appendicitis, there were two elements—one was the possibility of recognizing acute appendicitis when it occurs in your own person; the other is what the patient should do after he has recognized that he has appendicitis.

In the campaign against appendicitis, the medical profession first had to educate itself. When surgeons had learned to do simple, instead of elaborate, operations, the mortality fell from 60 per cent to about 4 per cent. With the education of the public it is hoped it can fall to 1 or 2 per cent. It must never be forgotten that appendicitis is a treacherous disease, and we probably never will be able to attain 100 per cent of cures.

I said yesterday that everyone who has acute pain in the abdomen in the course of a life of health, should consider the possibility of appendicitis. The pain need not be in the region of the appendix, but if accompanied by nausea or vomiting and fever, it must be regarded with suspicion. A great many people who have these pains put them down to cramps or indigestion or some minor thing, and proceed to treat themselves, calling in a druggist for consultation. This is what not to do.

The worst thing to do is to take a cathartic in the presence of an acute abdominal pain. If I could get drug clerks to prescribe paregoric instead of salts for everybody who has the bellyache, I would improve the health of the world no end. If I could get them to send such patients to a doctor, I would improve it even more.

The thing that people forget is that appendicitis in its early stage may be fairly mild and the patient is able to walk around and get himself some medicine, which he doesn't need. If the bellyache is simply cramps or indigestion, it will take care of itself. You can certainly afford to wait 24 or 48 hours or call a doctor. If it isn't simply acute indigestoin, the use of cathartics will turn a simple condition into a dangerous one because, as I pointed out yesterday, there is all the difference in the world between appendicitis, with the inflammation and pus inside the appendix, and appendicitis, with a perforation allowing pus to contaminate the peritoneum, leading to peritonitis. What the cathartic does is simply to help the appendix to rupture.

Besides not using a cathartic, the patient should also not take anything to eat, nor anything to drink, because these simply stir up intestinal movements, which also may result in perforatoin and peritonitis.

The first and most important rule is not to try to treat yourself. The second and corollary is to get somebody in that has some experience to treat you. In other words, call a doctor. If he arrives in time before you have a shock or perforation, he will probably order an immediate operatoin which will result in a prompt and simple cure. You have all heard about the surgeon arriving in the nick of time. He never arrives more often in the nick of time than he does in appendicitis. Sometimes he will feel justified in waiting, withholding all foods and drugs by mouth, and allow nature to wall off the infection. This also results in a very high percetnage of recoveries.

Trial and Error Develops Sauce For Each Meat

Long years of trial and error have finally decided for the housewife the bothersome questoin of "what sauces go best with meats." A section of the cupboard shelf set aside for a row of glass containers—bottles and jars of the necessary sauces—will enable you to provide just the right sauce with the right meat when needed.

Roast veal—Tomato sauce.
Roast mutton—Currant jelly.
Roast pork—Apple sauce.
Roast lamb—Mint sauce.
Roast turkey—Cranberry jelly.
Roast venison—Grape or currant jelly.
Roast goose—Currant jelly.
Roast duck—Black currant jelly.
Cold boiled tongue—Olives stuffed with peppers.
Sausage—Tomato sauce.
Frizzled beef—Horseradish.
Corned beef—Mustard or catsup.
Lobster—Tartar sauce.
Sweetbreads—Cream sauce.

Simple Magic for Parties

The enchanted glass takes a steady hand. Fill a drinking glass with water, making sure the rim is perfectly dry. Drop in coins, one by one, until the water bulges perilously above the rim without running over.

For the upright egg trick sprinkle a spot of salt on a white cloth before your audience knows what's up. The egg stands in it, staunch as a soldier. As you lift the egg to let your guests try the stunt themselves, deftly brush the salt away. Try as they will, they can't make the egg stand.

"Here are the aces of spades, diamonds and clubs," you announce, holding up three cards. Shuffle the three. Lay them on the table. Move your hands over them mysteriously, saying, "I command the ace of diamonds to disappear and the ace of hearts to take its place." Turn up the cards. Sure enough, there's the ace of hearts! Your audience won't guess that when you first held up the cards, only the pointed tip of the heart showed so it looked like a diamond.

After these baffling mysteries, your crowd's ready for lively games like Sardine or Paul Revere's Ride. Let's hope you always warm your parties at the start with ice-breakers like Glad Hands or Musical Partners.

Our 40-page booklet, Games for Good Parties, has more than 70 games of all sorts, as well as fascinating riddles, conundrums, magic and fortunes. Ideas for party food, too. Have more and gayer parties with the help of this valuable booklet.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Games for Good Parties, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

D. C. Society Plans to Visit Auto Races

Event at Long Island Raceway to Lure Diplomats.

Italian Ambassador, Wife Among Those Who Will Attend.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With the end of the wedding season in sight and the departure of noted foreign visitors scheduled for the closing days of June and the first week in July, it may look as if there won't be much happening around these parts through July and August.

Well, maybe not. But not far away there will be one big event, at least, that will draw a number of Washingtonians next week-end.

When the international speed kings roar away from the starting line at Roosevelt Raceway in Westbury, Long Island, at 2 o'clock next Saturday, there probably will be more socialites in the roof terrace boxes atop the three-story clubhouse than will be gathered for any other sports event away from Washington this summer.

Italian Ambassador Has Reserved a Box

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich, with the Italian consul general of New York, Commander Gaetano Vecchiotti, and Signora Vecchiotti and Andrea Ferraro, the consul, will be on hand to cheer the Italian speed masters.

Taxio Nuvolari, of Italy, who won the Vanderbilt Cup last October, will be back to defend the trophy. He will arrive on the Normandie with either Count Carlo Trossi or Dr. Guiseppe Farina as his teammate. Other foreign entrants, including representatives from England, Germany and Norway, also will arrive Monday or Tuesday.

The German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, and Frau Dieckhoff will be on hand to cheer representatives from their country. With the Ambassador will be Dr. Hans Borchers, consul general, Frau Borchers and a number of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. M. Burden will have as their guests Herr and Frau Herbert Scholz, Mr. William van Meister, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Pruyn and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Harriman.

Many Noted Persons Will Be Present

Among other widely known persons who have engaged boxes for the event are Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford, Mr. and Mrs. William Ladd and Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker.

Early interest in this, the second annual George Vanderbilt Cup classic, and in the $70,000 in prizes to be won, indicates this is to be one of the most exciting international sports events ever held in this country. Although Tazio Nuvolari was a comparatively easy winner of the inaugural event last year, there are indications he will have stiff opposition this year, not only from American cars and drivers, but also from his European rivals.

Three decades ago, the old Vanderbilt Cup contests for the trophy presented by William K. Vanderbilt were outstanding social and sports events of the summer. In 1910 the races were discontinued. Maj. George H. Robertson, now vice president and general manager of Roosevelt Raceway, was the first American winner of the old Vanderbilt Cup in 1908. The classic was revived last October, with George Vanderbilt the donnor of the cup. The new raceway is on the site of Mesdow Brook Plains, from which Col. Lindbergh took off for Paris.

New Register Lists Edward's Wedding

Of Interest to Washington is "The Summer Social Register," published Wednesday by the Social Register Association in New York. Of the 898 pages, page 458 is the most dramatic. There is recorded the marriage of H. R. H. the Duke of Windsor to Mrs. Wallis Warfield at Monts, France.

The book shows more American families living abroad this summer, some 20 per cent above last year and 1935. Shore resorts, Newport, Bar Harbor and other New England spots, are favored for summer recreation.

Many more marriages are listed this year, 1,019, against 983.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 25.

OUR TOWN has a favorite book, into which we dip daily, and it is not "G. W. T. W." Forgetting, for a moment, those best sellers concocted by Messrs. Sears - Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, our pet reading, day in and day out, is the local issue of the telephone directory, which has just appeared in its summer edition.

ALICE HUGHES.

And I'm not jesting in the least. This is a truly monumental tome which lies on our desks and hall tables, and worth anyone's time and study. In the first place, the benevolent phone company here is passing out no less than 587,000 copies of the new volume, or enough to allow any ordinary author to retire from hack work and write for posterity and peanuts. In it are all of 429,000 numbers, very few of them wrong, whatever the lady at the other end says.

The Gotham phone book is replete with interesting tidbits. For instance, in the new edition, as for some years past, the namen "Cohen" has led all the rest, including the Smiths. Of course, the winning name includes such spellings as Cohn and so forth, but the Cohens have it here, without much of a struggle.

And the fascinating book has many a noteworthy angle. For instance, there is always a struggle to be last in the listings. This has been accomplished, in the current volume, by a man named Cartwright, who has listed himself, for reasons known only to himself, as "A. ZZor," which won last place without a bit of trouble. Next to the well known Unabridged Dictionary, I don't know of any more worthwile reading than the Manhattan Telephone Directory, and if your public library hasn't a copy, scream and yell until one is laid in!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN. Today's the day! Did I hear you ask what day? Why the wedding day of Mary Pickford and Charles "Buddy" Rogers, silly-billy! Mary may be 44 and Kansas Bud a young 32, but the joy bells ring as loudly as they would for a couple of blushing kidlets. The romance dates back to the time, nearly a decade ago, when young Rogers played opposite Mary in the last of her silent films—am I right? She's always been one of my favorite people—a gallant little gal—and all happiness to her!

The other day I went out to our beautiful Briarcliff Lodge, a summer hotel not too far from town, and saw a pretty sight. As the feature of the swimming pool events, Ethelda Bleibtrey, former Olympic tank champ, and her little 8-year-old daughter Leila—a wondrous minnow—did an act together from the springboard. And was it swell!

Edna Ferber, who hasn't been writing enough pieces lately to satisfy her admirers, tells me that at last she's lined up enough stories to make a book. It will be out in the fall and will be called "Trees Die at the Top," taking its title from the first yarn.

Our State's women have long been battling for the right to serve on juries—if wanted—and now they've won. The other day 25 of the sisters signed for jury duty—and I never saw such pride of achievement! Beginning September 1 they'll be fully qualified to sit in judgment.

Who should turn up in our palpitating midst but Evelyn Nesbit, ex-Thaw, singing away at our Wivel Restaurant after a trial whirl in small out-of-town spots! Evelyn, who 31 years ago was one of the central figures in the historic Thaw case, is still a remarkably handsome woman, and full of ginger and gallantry. Her son Russell is now one of the country's leading fliers. And Evelyn warbles on!

Nothing interests us more, I suppose, than the handbag situation—what with all the appalling junk we have to lug about these days. I've just seen the grandest in history—a line made in Milan, Italy, and now on the counters of a great Fifth avenue shop. All are in soft calf save one of hazel lambskin. They are handsome, commodious and beautifully lined, and if they didn't cost so darned much I'd give in and buy them for the lot of you. They come high, but they're worth it.

It will be in honor of the three surviving founders of the organization, Mrs. Virginia King Frye, Mrs. Emma Triepel and Miss Anna Patten.

The hostess will be assisted by her sister, Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the branch, by several of the past presidents and also by Mrs. Thomas S. Settle, of Washington, and Mrs. Amos H. Chilcott, of Fairfax.

U. S. Aides Plan Party For July 4

Horse Show Is Part of the Elaborate Program.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

The Post Club Editor.

"Little Congress" will not adjourn on July 4, despite the fact the date is both Sunday and a holiday. It will conduct several sessions instead—presenting a pageant at Rhinehart's Riding Range, in Langley, Va., portraying meetings of the Virginia Convention and the Continental Congress, a session of Congress today and one as it may be 100 years from now.

The third portion of the program is that in which the women members of "Little Congress," an organization composed of secretaries and other attaches of both the House and Senate, will hold sway. The committee has agreed that the next century will probably see Congress dominated by women and it will be so portrayed in the Fourth of July pageant.

Barron Shields Heads Committee

Mr. Barron Shields, attache of Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, is chairman of the committee arranging the celebration, assisted by Miss Margaret Boyd, who is in the office of Representative W. D. MacFarlane, of Texas; Miss Essie Coleman, in the office of Representative Lex Green, of Florida; Mr. Joseph A. Clorety, who is with Representative John M. Costello, of California; Mr. David McCarrell, of the historical division of National Archives, who is collaborating in plans for authentic costumes and settings; Mr. Jerome Dillon, with Representative C. A. Anderson, of Missouri, and Mr. John Griggs, with Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri.

About 50 will take part in the pageant: Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, Edmund Pendleton, Archibald Cary and other great men of the time will be impersonated in the portion depicting events leading up to and including the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Senator Hattie Caraway and Senators William E. Borah, Joseph T. Robinson, J. Hamilton Lewis and George Norris will be among those impersonated in the scene devoted to Congress today. The members of "Little Congress" are so familiar with outstanding figures on Capitol Hill and their oratory, they are to be permitted ample liberty in interpreting their roles. It is expected that many members of the real Congress will motor to Langley next Sunday to see themselves as their secretaries see them.

In addition to the pageant, Mr. Paul E. Rhinehart, of Langley, who is donating the use of his property and the facilities of his stable for the event, will stage a horse show with riders and stables from all over the valley competing. The horse show will begin at 8 o'clock in the morning, and the pageant, to be presented on an out-door stage, will begin at 2 o'clock. There will be no admission charge.

Posters, which have been made by Marcia Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd Bartlett and a student at Friends School, will be placed on guideposts, directing visitors to the scene of the celebration.

"Little Congress" Elects Officers

"Little Congress" meets every Tuesday night while real Congress is in session. Mr. Joseph A. Clorety was elected last Tuesday night as speaker; Miss Kathleen Whittle, who is secretary to Representative J. Mark Wilcox, as clerk and Mr. William M. Miller, secretary to Representative William Colmer, as sergeant at arms.

The meetings in the caucus room of the old House Office Building follow the rules of the House of Representatives. From 8 to 9 o'clock the members discuss measures before Congress, and at 9 a bill is presented for debate by four members. At the end of their discussion, the meeting proceeds on the five-minute rule with discussion from the floor. The members finally vote on the bill. Many women are included in the several hundred active members of the organization, representing all the States of the Union.

Sorority Closes Season.

Women of the Moose Conduct Installation

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

ARTS AND LETTERS go hand in hand in the daily activities of Miss Doree Germaine Holman, program chairman of the Woman's Club of Bethesda. Not only does she plan the club programs, but she is, and has been for the last two years, editor of The Maryland Clubwoman, the magazine issued monthly by the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs.

Because this is not enough to keep her busy, she also has a class of music pupils whom she presented a few nights ago in a recital at the Bethesda club. The children included Jack Rubner, whose mother has recently been the Bethesda club president; Edwin Pugh, Newland Hauser, Ernestine Aiken, Mae Eanes, Anne Mae Pugh, Babs Park, Martha Ann Harper, Jean Lund, June Allen, Martha Eisele, Sandra Irvine, Gertrude Hamill, Eleanor Latimer, Ellen Parks, Marie Riley and Ursula Aiken, Little Stella Werner was on the program, too, playing Brahms' "Lullaby," while her mother, Mrs. John Werner, sang.

FATHER'S DAY was really celebrated in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Austin. Twins—a boy and a girl—were born to them last Sunday. Mrs. Austin was, before her marriage, Miss Marie Redman, and with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Redman, is an active member of Bethany Chaper, Order of the Eastern Star.

And, speaking of Bethany Chapter, one of its members, Mrs. Willie Goodwin, is an ardent baseball fan and an equally enthusiastic lobbyist when matters with which she is concerned are before Congress. However, the fact there is a ball game to go to or a session of the House to attend never interferes with her crocheting.

Yesterday she wore a white boucle suit and hat she had made, and sat and crocheted while she watched the Senators play. She had a green ribbon around her hat and a green belt at her waist, which she had added to her costume to match her green handbag, but—and these things happen to all of us—she came off in a hurry and picked up her black bag instead of her green one. However, safely tucked away in it was her crocheting. While she was lobbying in the House, a year or so ago, she finished a whole suit, by the way.

KITCHEN SHOWERS, linen showers and now comes a poetry shower. Nothing certainly could be more appropriate for Inez Sheldon Tyler, whose friends have planned it for her in recognition of the recent award she received of the poet's parchment from the National Poetry Center in New York. It will be a dinner at the A. A. U. W. next Wednesday night at 6:30, followed by an "animated anthology program" in the lounge. Each guest is asked to bring and to read an original poem which may or may not be dedicated to the guest of honor.

JUST as a little sidelight to the luncheon of the Soroptimists Wednesday, at which Miss Nora Huffman, a past president, spoke, it is interesting to recall Miss Huffman is the one responsible for the planting of the Soroptimist walk of lovely pink dogwood in Potomac Park, near the Lincoln Memorial. Not only did it beautify one of Washington's show places, but also inspired other Soroptimist clubs to follow the example and start similar improvements in their cities.

THE A. MONTAGUE FERRY family will enjoy the summer at their home in Kenwood. Allen, the older son and a junior medical student, is spending this month at the Baltimore City Hospital, and will then go to California for the remainder of the summer. Doris Ferry Purvis, with baby Elizabeth, and Dr. Clifford Purvis, of New Jersey, will visit her mother and father during August. Patsy and John, the younger members of the household, are putting in time playing tennis and golf at Chevy Chase Country Club and swimming at Kenwood Country Club, where they are members of the swimming team.

Besides her family duties, Mrs. Ferry finds the time to be an active member of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors and chairman of the Kamp Kahlert committee. Before coming to Washington, she was president of the League of Women Voters in Winnetka, Ill.

Alumni of Duke U. To Picnic Tonight

Duke University Alumni Association of Washington will hold its annual summer picnic and dance at Marshall Hall on the Potomac this evening.

The first unit of the Duke members and their friends will leave on the steamer City of Washington at 2 p. m. from the wharf at N street southwest. Those leaving later will catch the 5:30 p. m. or 8:30 p. m. boat.

This will be a regular old-fashioned picnic with soft ball, horseshoes, drop the handkerchief, tag, hiking, a supper, and dancing. To give it a real North Carolina flavor there also may be a short speech.

There are more than 450 Duke alumni in and near Washington, and W. J. Hobbs, president of the association, expects most of them to be present with as many of their friends as they may desire to bring.

Mrs. Emily Giles, installed as junior regent, has served for several years on committees and as a member of the senior regent's escort, while Mrs. Marion Rada, the new chaplain, has been a member of the executive board for two years, in capacity of treasurer, and Mrs. Ethel Phythian is returning to serve her fifth consecutive year as recorder.

Mrs. Susie Sorenson, the retiring senior regent, was installed in the role of adviser to the senior regent. Past Regent Mrs. Frances Mitchell made the presentation, on behalf of the officers and members, of a gift of table silver to the retiring senior regent.

Describes Work At Mooseheart

Mr. John Meikle, Mooseheart governor and former graduate, who recently attended the annual graduation, told the chapter and guests of the 31 boys and 23 girls in the 1937 class receiving high school diplomas and vocational certificates, showing them qualified to earn their living in one of the 13 trades or vocations in which they were trained. He also spoke of the impressive music furnished by the student soloists and orchestra. The diplomas were presented by Director General James J. Davis, the senior United States Senator from Pennsylvania, he said.

Past Regent Mrs. Grace Clark, on behalf of the alumni committee of the local chapter, presented to Mr. Meikle, as secretary of the General Alumni Association, a check covering receipts from a card party recently sponsored for the benefit of the revolving fund, which is maintained for assisting graduates in securing higher education or business careers.

The musical selections of the evening were by Mr. Emil Rada, member of the U. S. Marine Band, and Mr. Charles Foster, graduate of Mooseheart, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Viola Creason.

Among the guests were Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder; Mrs. Mary Schafer, of Atlantic City, the State publicity chairman for New Jersey, Women of the Moose; Senior Regent Mrs. Melnick, of Arlington Chapter; Senior Regent Mrs. Ethel Shoemaker, of Baltimore Chapter, and Dictator W. Bob Burns Says:

My Uncle Waldo was a self-made man and he was proud of the success he'd made in life, but his son, Reginald, had never shown any signs of making anything of himself at all. One day my uncle called his son before him and he said, "Son you're a bitter disappointment to me. You ain't nothin' but a lounge lizard. All you think of is dressin' up and going to teas and dances. You never done a day's work in your life. When I was your age I use'ta have to carry water up five floors to a bunch of brick-layers."

The son looked up and says, "Father, I want you to know I'm proud of you. If it hadn't been for your perseverance and pluck, I might have to do somethin' like that myself."

Protest

The National Civil Service Reform League yesterday telegraphed President Roosevelt its disapproval of the independent offices appropriation bill, calling it a "negation of the merit system." The telegram, signed by Robert L. Johnson, president of the N. C. S. R. L., said:

"On behalf of the National Civil Service Reform League (I) respectfully and earnestly urge disapproval of H. R. 4064, independent offices appropriation bill, which ill-advisedly provides for confirmation by the Senate of all positions of experts and attorneys receiving compensation of $5,000 or more.

"Such proposal is a negation of the merit system in the public service and will ultimately turn these positions over to senatorial patronage.

"We view requirement of confirmation by Senate of these positions archaic and unwarranted. Such confirmation requirement, if defensible at all, should be strictly confined to policy-determining positions of highest order. Approval would establish unfortunate precedent and encourage similar requirement for other departments.

"It would demoralize public service and make career system as advocated by you impossible.

"I earnestly hope that your recent letter to Congress admonishing them not to make exemptions from the civil service act will be followed by veto of this measure. Such action would follow precedent set by President Roosevelt in 1908, vetoing the census bill, and President Taft in 1912, vetoing executive, judicial and legislative appropriation bill, because of their spoils riders."

More Protest

The Emergency Relief Appropriation act of 1937, which passed the Senate this week—is frowned on by the Committee Against False Economy, the organization that stormed into the C. L. O. ranks. By unanimous resolution, the committee declared itself as "opposed to the inclusion of the apportionment principle in provisions governing the employment and dismissal of administrative employes in emergency agencies." This measure, if finally passed, "would mean immediate dismissal of thousands of Government employes from the District and the neighboring States of Maryland and Virginia," it was stated.

Gram, Local 372, Finance, and Mrs. Rebekah Pedigo, Local 2, Buying Service.

The Pro-Tem Club of the Farm Credit Administration is an interesting group. During the past year—according to a recent report—86 new girls have entered F. C. A. and have become members of the club. The group includes the 40 newest girls in the F. C. A. When a new girl reports for duty, she becomes a member and the fourtieth girl on the list is automatically dropped from membership. The chairman has to meet each new girl on the day she reports for duty and take her to lunch. If she thinks the new girl needs assistance in getting adjusted, an older member of the club is appointed as an adviser. The club's activities include swimming, dancing, parties, hiking and sightseeing trips. And this seems one of the most worth-while clubs we've heard of.

Boys Play Role of Maids for Young Sisters As Club Picks Prettiest of Charming Misses

Daphne Fleming, 8, Wins Unanimous Vote of Judges.

Amid tunes of a swing band, stage whispers of "Smile, Snooky, smile!" from the gallery, and yawns and tears on the part of contestants, the Boys Club of Washington held its beauty contest yesterday. Blonde, bright-eyed Daphne Fleming, 8, was unanimously chosen the winner. She received a bouquet, a loving cup and the title of "Miss Boys Club of Washington."

Betty Lou Poston, 6, was named prettiest blonde, and 2-year-old Martha Dinsmore, prettiest brunette. No one showed up to enter the red-haired class. Unperturbed by the shortage of titians, the judges decided to call Daphne a redhead and let it go at that.

Contestants had to have brothers in the Boys Club and be less than 9 years old.

It was a busy day for the brothers, who apparently had neglected their own grooming to attend to their sisters'. The girls looked resplendent, however. All wore the very latest thing in party dresses and showed signs of recent encounters with the curling iron.

Some of the boys took their responsibilities more seriously than others. A rebellious few refused to have anything to do with their sisters once they had arrived at the Boys Club gymnasium. Others were more solicitous.

One in particular clutched his 2-year-old sister firmly by the hand and at frequent intervals guided her into a corner of the room. Here he made slight adjustments in the hang of her sole undergarment, stepped back to see if it was sufficiently concealed by her skirt, and marched back onto the floor with her.

Tears, Yawns and Music Intermingle at Novel Beauty Contest.

Judges were Private Lawrence Cannon, of the Metropolitan Police Department; Miss Etta Mai Russell, of the Federation of Churches, and the Rev. Randolph Gregory, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church. All are members of the Central Neighborhood Council.

"Miss Boys Club of Washington" is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Estes Fleming, 227 Third street. Martha's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Dinsmore, of 224 C street northwest. Betty Lou, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumter S. Poston, lives at 320 Sixth street northeast.

Budget Cut Fails to Win Tax Slashes

D. C. Needs 'Every Cent' From Omnibus Bill, Donovan Says.

By James D. Secrest.

Sacrifice of more than $600,000 in Senate appropriations in the District supply bill will bring about no recommendations from District officials for reductions in the omnibus tax measure, it was stated yesterday.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, had stated he would yield on many of the money items prior to the conference in order to ease the tax burden on District residents.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan stated that the Dsitrict will need "every cent" that the tax bill may raise to meet an estimated $7,000,000 deficit in the general revenue fund.

Taking issue with other officials who had forecast that the business privileg tax will raise $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, Maj. Donovan said:

Cites Reductions.

He explained that the gross returns might total $5,000,000, but that the crediting of tangible personal property returns on the tax payments and specific exemptions would reduce the net revenue substantially.

As a consequence, the Commissioners, who are guided by Maj. Donovan's calculations, are not expected to recommend to the Senate District Committee any cuts in the tax bill, although the deficit has dropped some $600,000 since the tax bill passed the House.

This calculation gives little hope to the civic groups which were seeking to have the 20-cent realty tax hike eliminated in the Senate.

Nevertheless, Senator Capper, ranking Republican member of the committee, plans to make a fight against the tax when hearings begin at 10 a. m. Monday.

Meanwhile, clerks of the Senate and House sub-committees on District appropriations were still struggling with the changes made in the local budget on Thursday.

The exact total of the suply bill was still in doubt last night as the Senate and House clerks were about $126,000 apart. It appeared, however, that the appropriation would approximate $46,000,000.

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee plans to call up the conference report on Monday.

A city-wide fight against the chain store tax attached to the District tax bill by the House appeared in prospect because of the growing fear that it will bring about general increases in food prices.

May Hit "Proprietary" Chains.

Tax experts yesterday expressed the informal opinion that the language of the Dies amendment will impose the $550 a store tax on seven "voluntary" chain food stores, as well as the three major proprietary" chains.

The amendment states that the tax shall be imposed on establishments under the "same general management, supervision, ownership or control, whether operated in the District of Columbia or not."

While the tax is directed against the organized chain stores, it is likely that it would be applied to independent stores banded together to obtain the benefits of mass purchasing.

The matter will be gone into thoroughly, however, when the hearings are held before the Senate District Committee.

Tom Honored in Death by Protective Association, Children and City Smoke-Eaters; Marker Is Unveiled.

Old Tom never was much of a one for making speeches. A vehement snort or a shake of the head was about the only form of self-expression he indulged in. But had he been able to hear the speeches at a memorial service in his honor yesterday even he might have been prompted to say a few words.

Tom, last of the District's fire horses, died peacefully May 3 in his pasture adjoining the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm. He had been honorably discharged from the District of Columbia Fire Department 12 years before.

Yesterday the Fire Department joined with the Animal Protective Association in unveiling a headstone to his memory. About 75 firemen, children and others interested in honoring the faithful animal were present at the ceremony.

The simple stone is marked "In Memory of Tom, Last Horse in D. C. F. D." and gives his age, date of retirement and date of death. A large wreath, appropriately shaped like a horseshoe, stood behind it, and other floral tributes were strewn on the grave itself.

Miss Virginia W. Sargent, president of the Animal Protective Association, was the principal speaker. She lauded Tom's qualities of gentleness, courage and loyalty.

Capt. Raymond E. Oden, of No. 25 Firehouse, also praised Tom for his faithfulness and long service.

War to Curb Traffic Toll Opens in D.C.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Supported by civic and official leaders, with the help of Sidney J. Williams, president of the National Safety Council, preliminary organization plans are ready for Washington's proposed citizen-official traffic safety council.

Williams, here for sessions of the Highway Research Board, met with local organizers of the community safety program in the capacity of consultant. To the end that Washington may rid its streets of needless slaughter and destruction, Williams offered the benefits of his experience.

Drive Grew From Dinner.

The local movement for an organized attack on traffic problems was a result of The Post's testimonial dinner last spring to Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, traffic expert of Evanston, Ill., who won national honors for his work.

By an overwhelming vote from Government and city leaders, it was agreed to launch a concrete move toward safety promotion.

In the absence of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, who was named chairman, Edward F. Colladay, president of the Board of Trade, vice chairman, will call a meeting of the organizing committee early next week.

The organization committee is expected to adopt an operating agenda and name additional members who will constitute the ultimate Washington Traffic Safety Council.

Members of the Staff.

In addition to Colladay and Meyer, other members of the organizing staff include Police Supt. Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; Col Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner; Gratz Dunkum, Board of Education; Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman, traffic committee, Board of Trade; Burton Marsh, safety director, American Automobile Association; George Keneippe, manager, Keystone Automobile Club; Robert Swope, president, Washington Rotary Club; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president, Parent-Teacher Association; Thomas E. Lodge, president, Federation of Citizens Associations.

Yesterday's meeting, attended by various members of this unit, prepared plans and problems to be considered by the full meeting.

A paramount factor in highway safety promotion, Williams declared, is a co-ordinated community movement. Support of safety efforts must come from all sides, he said.

The program, he added, must be continuous—not short-lived. Every city which has outstanding records in traffic safety, Williams pointed out, is organized along such lines.

He cited Milwaukee, Wis., as one of the foremost examples.

"Washington may have problems unlike any other city in the country," Williams declared, "but from my knowledge of conditions here, I am certain there is a solution. It will take long months of hard pounding—but it can be done."

Better Housing Plans Initiated By U. S. Group

National Committee Talks of Co-operation by Material Makers.

The first formal action of the newly created National Housing Committee was taken when members of the committee met in Washington yesterday and set on foot a long-range program for housing reform.

Mgr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, was elected chairman of the committee, which includes Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Mayor LaGuardia of New York, David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and other leaders of industry and labor.

"No national problem outranks housing in its urgent economic and social importance," Mgr. Ryan said in a statement following the meeting. "Housing is of the greatest immediate importance to the taxpayer, the renter, the businessman. There is no citizen, whatever his geographical or social status, who does not pay part of the toll taken by substandard housing."

The committee discussed the need for bringing together producers of materials used in housing. A committee on industrial co-operation was authorized.

The committee declared its support of the Wagner-Steagall bill and other acceptable housing legislation.

New Legion Post Dedicates Colors

With more than 500 persons in attendance the newly formed Potomac Post No. 40 of the American Legion dedicated its colors in the Palisades Field House in Potomac Heights yesterday.

Preceding the ceremony the drum and bugle corps of Fort Stevens Post led a procession of colors of several of the posts and units of the legion and its auxiliary to the rostrum. Following this, the guard of honor of the legion escorted the department officers to the speakers' platform where the departmental commander, Horace W. Lineburg, later spoke.

Other speakers on the program included Capt. Watson B. Miller, national rehabilitation officer, who dedicated the new post colors, and Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committeeman of the District Department of the Legion. The officers of the new Potomac Post then installed the new officers of their legion auxiliary unit, while the department officers of the auxiliary followed with the installation service of all the new unit members.

Duplicate Report On Lincoln Death Missing From File

His first clew in his investigation into the police records on the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln was discovered yesterday by Detective Frank O. Brass.

Searching through musty police files of 72 years ago, Brass found that the duplicate set of the report on the historic shooting in Ford's Theater April 14, 1865, was missing, and indications were that it has been gone more than 20 years.

Brass now will search through more ancient records to see if he can find the original notes in the "incidental book," in which officers wrote their first reports. If he finds these, he will have them photostated and turned over to history students.

Yesterday Brass stumbled across a couple of incidentals. These it is expected, will be photostated today for further study.

3 Children Hurt In 2 Accidents

Two boys were injured yesterday, one of them seriously, when they ran into the rear of car while riding a bicycle near Sixth street and Maryland avenue southeast. Kenneth Kendall, 13, of 651 Maryland avenue northeast was taken to Casualty Hospital. He may have a skull fracture.

His companion, Wilbur Shope, 10, of 637 Maryland avenue northeast, who was riding on the rear of the bicycle, was treated at the hospital and sent home. Police said the driver of the car was Leonard Hansford, 33, colored, of 920 Third street northeast.

Seven-year-old Lena Mae Whidden, of Lake Wales, Fla., was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night after she had fallen out of a window of a taxicab in which she was riding with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Whidden, and two sisters. The mishap occurred near the Union Station.

Dr. J. H. Johnson Is Honored by 1,000 Residents

Retiring Education Board Member Praised for 21 Years' Service.

A testimonial, sponsored by more than 1,000 citizens of the District of Columbia, was tendered Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, last night in the auditorium of the Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church, on the termination of his 21 years of service. He will be succeeded July 1 by Col. West A. Hamilton.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, outlining the daily routine and characteristics of service, praised Dr. Johnson for his sound judgment, sanity in the shaping of educational policies, rare sense of humor, and kindly leadership.

Co-operation with Dr. Johnson in constructive endeavor was the theme of remarks by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools, who entered the Washington system, he said, after being "looked over," by the retiring member. "He leaves the Board of Education," said Dr. Ballou, "with the respect and love of everyone who has been associated with him."

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, on behalf of divisions 10-13 of public schools, bespoke appreciation for the unselfish service rendered by Dr. Johnson.

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, was master of ceremonies. Brief tributes were paid Dr. Johnson by William I. Lee, president, Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations; the Rev. J. D. Pair, Civic Federation; Judge Armond W. Scott, Municipal Court; Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, women's organizations; Dr. Cyril A. Walwyn, Medico-Chirurgical Society; Henry Lincoln Johnson, Washington Bar Association; Dr. William T. Grady, Robert T. Freeman Dental Society; Ethel Harris Grubbs, Columbian Educational Association; Mary Mason Jones, Teachers' Union.

The guest of honor was presented with a silver set in six pieces, by the Rev. Edgar A. Love, on behalf of the sponsors. Musical numbers were rendered by the Miner Teachers' College Glee Club, the Cardozo High School Orchestra and the Capital City String Quartet.

Robert A. Sisson Gets Prison Term

Robert A. Sisson, former assistant cashier of the Hamilton National Bank, was sentenced from 18 months to three years in District Court yesterday following his guilty plea a week ago when he admitted embzzling a small amount of money from the bank. According to Federal agents Sisson took, altogether, about $17,000, but his plea admitted only a fraction of that amount. He was also charged with making false entries in the books. He is said to have used the money he obtained from the bank to finance a home in Maryland.

School Party Postponed.

The party planned at the Peggy Kelly School of the Dance by the New Dance Group of Washington for tomorrow has been postponed indefinitely, it was announced yesterday.

New Zealand Scouts Quit Jobs To Attend National Jamboree

New Zealand's delegation to the Boy Scout Jamboree beat the Maryland group to Washington by six days. After describing a semi-circle around the globe by boat and bus, they arrived in Washington Monday.

West Virginia's Boy Scouts will come today on a special train. A total of 5,000 boys is expected during the day.

The unique feature of New Zealand's delegation is that it is co-educational. Eric I. Saunders, 25, and Phil Barborough, 24, are accompanied by Miss Helen Ryder. The two men are "Rover Scouts," an adult branch of the Boy Scouts. Miss Ryder is known as a "lady cub master." She is in charge of a troop of "cubs," the equivalent of Brownie Scouts.

All three come from Wellington, New Zealand. The combination works out very well. Saunders looks after the money, Barborough guards the luggage and Miss Ryder does the darning.

The baggage (four suitcases and two rucksacks) contains clothing for two years in addition to a variety of articles for "swap"—a practice common to jamborees of this type. In exchange for a collection of "woggles" (neckerchief slides) and native New Zealand wood carvings, they hope to receive from American Scouts some arrowheads and other Indian ware.

The three have been counting on this trip for two and a half years, ever since plans for the jamboree here were announced in 1935. From Washington they will go to Holland to attend the world jamboree there later this summer. Then they will visit London, where they hope to work for a while.

Miss Ryder gave up her job as stenographer for a General Motors branch in Wellington to come. Saunders is a printer and Barborough had a position with a soap manufacturing plant.

Today's arrivals will include boys from Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Maryland, New York, New Jersey and Delaware. Twenty-six trains are bringing them. The Texas delegation itself, consisting of more than 500 boys, will occupy three trains.

Further plans for the July 4 convocation were announced yesterday. Lanny Ross, radio singer and formerly a Boy Scout himself, will be the entertainer. He will sing Kipling's "Requiem" and "The Scoutmaster's Prayer." Another feature will be a "community sing," with 25,000 boys participating.

D. C. Controllers Win Henry Trophy

Members of the National Capital group of controllers returned to Washington yesterday bearing the Alfred Henry Trophy, they won for the second consecutive time at the Controllers Congress, in Chicago. The cup is presented annually to the local controllers' group which has been of greatest aid to the association during the year in its purpose of placing the function of retailing on a more scientifis basis.

As another feature in their collective cap, Harold G. Malone, controller of The Hecht Co., was re-elected director of the Controllers Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Officers of the Capital group include Malone, chairman; J. Frank Brown, controller of S. Kann Sons Co., vice chairman, and A. Coonin, controller of the William Hahn Co., secretary-treasurer.

Tale of Desert Shares Honors With Laughter

'Another Dawn' on Screen and Comedy Stage Acts Vie at the Earle.

"ANOTHER DAWN." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Laird Doyle, starring Kay Francis, with Errol Flynn, Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescourt, Herbert Mundin, G. P. Huntley, jr., Billy Bevan, Clyde Cook, Mary Forbes, Richard Powell, Kenneth Hunter, Elly Malyon and others. Directed by William Dieterle. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater by Mary Harris.

All the show's a quick change at the Earle this week. Owen McGiveney transforms himself from Fagin into Nancy Sykes in the flash of a split second on the stage. Kay Francis, on the screen, leaps from one love affair to another in nothing flat, with Ian Hunter and Errol Flynn figuring as sendee and receivee in the amorous adagio.

Owen McGiveney's quickie drama furnishes the only serious moments in a stage show full fattened with laughs. Not that Mr. McGiveney's drama novelty does not have its irresistibly comic moments when he scuttles from trousers to petticoats and vice versa in full view of the audience and with unbelievable speed. As a virtuoso of the protean drama and lightning change, Mr. McGiveney is in the "one and only" class. His tabloid drama of the climactic event of Dickens' "Oliver Twist," includes remarkable characterizations of Nancy and Bill Sykes, the artful dodger, Fagin and Monks. To the enlightenment and vast interest of the audience, Mr. McGiveney permits a full and free view of how these changes in costume and make-up are effected in two to three seconds.

It Is to Laugh!

A three-way tie in laughs is registered by Arren and Broderick, Barr and Estes and the Three Weire Brothers. Also the types of laughs are grandly contrasted.

Miss Broderick is a laugh-jerker, one of the type that leaves the audience weak with mirth, but not too weak to applaud madly for more. Partner Arren is a nifty novelty piano player. Barr & Estes (we don't know which one is the pretty girl) go in for droll humor expressed in dancing.

As for those Three Weire Brothers, they should be called the Three Weird Brothers. Their idea of humor is provoking and maddening, modern as a Peter Arno cartoon and sassy as a pet pig. In fact, now that we think of it, in expression they are exact ringers for the "Three Little Pigs."

Lush Romance.

"Another Dawn" is desperate r-r-romance, my children. The idea is that passion is like the sirocco that blows hot and heavy out of the desert and that Kay Francis and Errol Flynn can't do a thing about the great love that has seized upon them, even if Kay is the wife of Ian Hunter. This is very pleasant, indeed, for the movie fans, for Miss Francis and Mr. Flynn are about the handsomest pair of lovers anyone would want to see, even though Orry-Kelly has betrayed Miss Francis with a couple of trick hats.

There is something Kiplingesque about the story of "Another Dawn," which is laid in a far-flung British outpost on the desert, where a colonel, played nobly by Ian Hunter, copes as best he can with tricky native chieftains. His chief aide is Errol Flynn who, if you ask us, isn't the sort of person to have around impressionable wives, especially if the wife has married without pretense of love, as is the case in "Another Dawn," after the death of her aviator-lover who seems to have resembled Flynn.

Fighting and Sacrifice.

There is fighting in the desert, haunting tropical music, some very lush and poetical wordage, an affecting little subdrama about a soldier who wipes out the stain of cowardice with a heroic death. And as usual, Ian Hunter, who ought to be used to it by now, erases himself from the picture so that love can face "Another Dawn."

A Grantland Rice sports short of South American sports ranks as one of his finest. It features the great polo players of the Argentine and that tough game jai-alai, as played in Havana. Tom Girdler, in the news reel, received a strong round of applause, with Murray of the C. I. O. also rating some paddy-whacks, while Gen. Hugh Johnson, speaking for the general public, got nary a pat-pat. Such is the fate of those who stand in the middle. "Hollywood Party" in Technicolor is gay diversion, with stars and starlets contributing to the doings.

Trans-Lux

Lightning action literally fills the Trans-Lux screen on this new program with, of course, the new March of Time punctuating the news line-up with that distinction of presentation that marked the productions of the late Mr. Belasco.

Poland, the tinder-box of the European war front; the lamentable plight of the Western dust bowl, and collecting and fancying dogs are Time's trio of world discussions.

But the sports! Fitness is certainly the cry of the hour—and youth is seen coming "of-sports-age." Even Joe Louis gets into the parade. Rowing, acrobatics, seaplane flying, sailing (here and abroad), musher dogs racing overland from British Columbia to Nova Scotia minus the snow, the Middies in the gym, Danish mass athletics, women polo stars and the Langhorne auto race, with the training of track horses tossed in to complete the picture.

President Roosevelt looks equally fit when he greets the distinguished Paul Zeeland, while the Rockefellers and the Hughes family split top honors at Brown University. The Russian fliers take San Francisco by storm and Paris decrees Spanish hair styles without saying which side of the Iberian war they are supposed to favor. The Japs install a new Cabinet and new French bombers take air tests.

China, India, Italy, Holland, Alaska manage to share the international lens of the movie cameras, adding variety that is brought nearer home with some excellent shots of the Ohio steel strike sector.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

"THE LAST TRAIN FROM MADRID." Paramount picturization of a story by Paul Hervey Cox and Elsie Cox, adapted to the screen by Louis Stevens and Robert Wyler, featuring Gilbert Roland, Dorothy Lamour, Lew Ayres, Karen Morley, Lionel Atwill and Helen Mack, with Robert Cummings, Olympe Bradna, Anthony Quinn, Lee Bowman, Ralf Harolde, Stanley Fields, Francis McDonald and scores more. Directed by James Hogan. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, June 22.

The first picture making use of the Spanish civil war as a background for a series of melodramatic romances to come to the screen, this subject presents a myriad elements of appeal. The locale of "The Last Train From Madrid" is the Spanish capital and its environs and the time, the day upon which the last train for Valencia is to remove a picked passenger list to safety on the seacoast. The action opens with the liberation of convicts from the prisons to take their places on the firing front—the equivalent of a exchange of one day of freedom for certain death.

BELL.

Among the freed prisoners is Eduardo de Soto, a political offender, who is aided to escape by a former fighting comrade in Morocco, now an officer attached to headquarters in Madrid. Between the two there is an eternal bond of faithful friendship. To evade the military police, Eduardo seeks asylum in the home of Carmelita, the girl he was to have wed. Into the house a little later comes Capt. Alvarez, the officer who has only a few hours before rendered his friend a service. He, too, loves Carmelita. It is upon this triangular situation that the final climax of the play hinges—a climax that runs high in suspense and is thickly studded with tragic incident.

Parallel Romances.

But this is merely the central motivation that carries along a half-dozen other parallel narratives of others equally in turmoil and distress. There are the little native girl whose father is about to be executed, who is befriended by an American newspaper reporter; the despairing girl who encounters a youthful soldier condemned to the trenches because he could not shoot down victims of the firing squad; the baroness and her former lover, a money-grubbing cad and cheat, and the lesser characters that seek to find some way to get aboard the last train out, leaving that midnight.

With so many characters involved and such widely separated points of dramatic attack, the development of the early sequences of the exciting story is necessarily episodic. There is too much diversity of character and incident to be quickly woven into a closely knit and unified pattern. Of the closing reels, in the station as the train is about to depart, this is not true. Here there is achieved a tenseness and a direct emotional appeal that rather pull the whole thing together.

The war scenes have been caught by the cameras with utmost fidelity to the horrifying aspects of modern armed conflict and Director James Hogan has displayed unusual capacity for handling milling crowds of frenzied and terror-stricken people effectively. There can be no complaint against the atmospheric integrity of "The Last Train From Madrid" or of its determination not to take sides, but merely to utilize the Spanish revolt as a setting for a picture that deals strictly with people and not political causes.

Acting Is Adequate.

There are various measures of acting worth contributed to the drama by a huge cast. Gilbert Roland and Dorothy Lamour, as the pivotal characters in the play, acquit themselves well, Mr. Roland returning to something of his former eminence and Miss Lamour giving promise of becoming a valuable actress to the cinema. Anthony Quinn, a comparative newcomer, does an uncommonly fine piece of work as Capt. Alvarez and that sturdy veteran, Lionel Atwill, is an efficient and effective martinet in the role of the commanding general.

Olympe Bradna and Lew Ayres provide the lighter vein of the story, as the orphaned girl and the American reporter, and Karen Morley is a cold and self-reliant baroness, who plays a vital part in the final outcome of events. Helen Mack and Robert Cummings lend infinite pathos to the roles of the two youngsters who wanted to find peace in the country and found only tragedy there. Lee Bowman, Stanley Fields, Ralf Harolde and a long list of others lend distinction to parts that are distinctly minor.

An Old-Time Act.

The stage portion of the bill at the Capitol this week is headlined by a nostalgic act that brings back memories of the day when vaudeville was at its crest. Charlie Smith and Joe Dale have revived their old Avon Comedy Four act of the Hungarian goulash restaurant and Dr. Kronkheit's office, a dialect comedy standard of the two-a-day. They are assisted by Mario and Lazarin to complete the quartet. These two combine a keen comedy sense with fine tenor and barytone voices. The act closes with a male quartet number such as hasn't been heard in many a long day. It is good to have this bit of clowning revived.

The program is opened by the Wing Troupe of Chinese acrobats and jugglers, experts in their field. They are followed by Joe Morrison, famous for "The Last Round-Up," who sings in fine voice and scored decisively yesterday afternoon. The Karre Lebaron Dancers close the bill with a colorful succession of semi-adagio routines.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture further augment a feature that is the first of its kind in the field.

Kipling Fund Begun.

London, June 25 (AP).—Queen Mother Mary and her brother, the Earl of Athlone, announced today that a fund of £250,000 ($1,250,000) will be raised for a memorial to Rudyard Kipling.

Fugitives From a Besieged City

Two devoted lovers find themselves marooned in a beleaguered city from which only one more rigidly guarded train will depart for the seacoast and safety. Only one of them has a pass. This all occurs in "The Last Train From Madrid," now at Loew's Capitol, in which two of the principal roles are played by Gilbert Roland and Dorothy Lamour, the two distraught young people pictured above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

HOLLYWOOD, June 25.—Idol chatter: Colleen Moore's exhibition doll house has more box-office appeal than many of Hollywood's favorite dolls. Mrs. Withers reminds me of a hen with a duckling. Nutshell description of Evelyn Venable: Unven-(er)able. Don't feel sorry for once-famous Mary Philbin; she is doing so well on the stock market that Wall Street is refusing to recognize her amateur ranking. Chip off the old block: Tyrone Power jr. box lunches on location trips have spoiled Hollywood's picnic spirit.

NELSON EDDY.

Wonder if Gary Cooper could still sell classified ads for newspapers? Hollywood: where every other back-slapper hopes you have a sunburn. There is nothing quite so pathetic as the expression on a movie star's face as he signs a traffic tag.

Fun to watch: Boss Adolph Zukor taking three steps to Fred MacMurray's one as they walk across the lot. Mystery: Why are Nelson Eddy's complaints anent women pursuing him always addressed to the publicity department? ZaSu Pittts can whip up a mean midnight waffle.

Give Lionel Barrymore a chance and he will tell you about the time he was knocked cold by John L. Sullivan. A comedian would say it: "A fan in the aisle is worth two in the seats." Automobile insurance costs stars almost twice what they charge you and me. Fredric March still says his prayers every night. Daily laugh: Five minutes after Jimmy Cagney bought that new yacht he was in the corner drug store stocking up on seasick remedies.

He seemed so old and weak and pitiable as he stood on the corner, waiting for the bus to the Warner Brothers Studios that I automatically stopped my car and invited him to ride with me. And as he sat beside me I could not help but notice the painstaking care with which his cheap suit had been patched and pressed.

As we turned into the studio parking lot he asked me what my work might be. "I write," I told him. "Oh," he said, and I've never heard such polite condescension in a voice, "I am an actor!"

I have heard so many people sneeringly refer to the charities of screen stars as grandstand gestures calculated to impress their fans; that it does me good to tell this true story.

When Joan Crawford was an obscure extra girl, she hurt her back in a fall and went to a famous surgeon for treatment. Not having much money, she was grateful for his willingness to accept payment in dribs.

One evening she stopped by with a payment and announced that she had just signed a contract with M-G-M. "If I make good," she told the doctor solemnly, "I'm going to establish a charity ward where people who have no means can be taken care of without sacrificing their pride."

Last year she financed the treatment of more than a hundred patients in the well-equipped ward which she maintains in the Hollywood Hospital.

Virginia Bruce confessed to me that she has one urge that cannot be denied much longer.

"Some day," she said, "I've simply got to meet Greta Garbo. I'm going to walk into her dressing room and say, 'Look, you used to be in love with John Gilbert. I married him. I think we have a lot in common, so let's get acquainted.'"

Columbia

"Parnell," the pseudo-biographical screen drama based on the tempestuous life of Charles Stewart Parnell, great Irish patriot and statesman, has moved down F street from the Capitol Theater to the Columbia.

In this story of political strife and a single-handed fight to unite a nation divided against itself, there are combined both conflict and the gentler quality of romance—a romance that came nearer wrecking the career of Parnell than any other single circumstance of his life. The greater part of the action is devoted to Parnell's fight for home rule for Ireland on the floor of the British Parliament—his trip to the United States to raise funds for his cause, the bickerings among his own people—but occasionally there occur scenes that leave all this behind and reveal a great man hopelessly in love.

Unfortunately for him, Parnell had the disturbing experience of falling in love with the wife of a third-rate political parasite, who sued for divorce and named Parnell as co-respondent. Ruin for all of the plans so carefully laid for Ireland's independence seemed the only possible outcome. How the tide was turned, with Parnell on his death bed, forms the crux of the drama.

Clark Gable is miscast in the title role and Myrna Loy plays the role of Kitty O'Shea with glacial frigidity, but there is, nevertheless, the underlying strength of the material with which the play deals. There are many in the long cast who contribute notably to such integrity as "Parnell" can boast, among them Montagu Love, as Gladstone; Edna May Oliver, as Aunt Ben; Edmund Gwenn, as Parnell's faithful secretary; Donald Crisp, as Davitt; Berton Churchill, as The O'Gorman Mahon, and Billie Burke as the prying Clara.

Gay Comedy Is Repeating Hit On Met Screen

'I Met Him in Paris' Is a Lively Frolic for 'Able Cast.

This gay, bright, smart little comedy can boast of a Swiss (via Sun Valley, Idaho) setting guaranteed to keep you cooler than air conditioning and three nice people whom you'll envy with pleasure.

If every American girl could be sure of meeting two such attractive American men in Paris as Miss Colbert does in this role and of proceeding with them in almost nonstop fashion to the Alps, the summer sailings would be booked solid. Suffice it to say, that if you haven't seen her adventurers and haven't met her most amusing companions and unusual suitors, you're lucky that the picture merely moved from Thirteenth to F street. Don't miss it.

Items particularly worthy of note and perhaps overlooked in a first laugh-filled viewing, include Mr. Douglas' faint, Mr. Young and Miss Colbert's discussion of platonic friendship, Mr. Douglas' face throughout and particularly when surprised in the midst of a double Scotch and soda. Mr. Douglas' skating learned on his home lake rink in Madison, Wis., Mr. Young's skating completely unlearned, and practically everything about all three of these very skillful comedians who never make you too conscious of that skill. You will also like the Swiss hotel clerk, a sort of junior Eric Blore with a French accent instead of a British, and Miss Colbert's home-town washout of a beau.

Palace

"Captains Courageous," to all who view it, always will remain a memorable film. It possesses those qualities of greatness that spring from simplicity, directness and a fine embodiment of human emotions that have the ring of truth. It was inevitable, of course, that a picture of this importance should have been continued a second week on the Palace screen.

Adapted with intelligence and skill from the Kipling story, by John Lee Mahin, Marc Connelly and Dale Van Every, the play primarily is the character study of the spoiled son of a rich father, but as a background for that engrossing narrative is the minute exposition of the hardy lives of the Gloucester fishermen, plying their calling out on the Grand Banks. It is the example of these rugged folk that finally brings about the redemption of an egotistical, lying, hypocritical little brat, whose outlook upon life was such that none of his own age would have anything to do with him and his principal, finally, was compelled to expel him from school and return him to the care of his baffled father.

A trip to Europe seemed an easy solution. On the way across, Master Harvey falls overboard from the liner and is rescued by a fishing schooner. Aboard Capt. Disko's boat he is as unruly and as contemptible as he had been ashore—until Manuel, the Portuguese fisherman, takes him in hand and by a gradual process of patience and perseverance imbues the youthful mind with something of the meaning of fair play and honest living.

Spencer Tracey, as Manuel; Freddie Bartholomew, as Harvey, and Lionel Barrymore, as Capt. Disko, give performances that are unforgettable. They are supported by a cast that is scarcely less competent, led by Charles Grapewin, Melvyn Douglas, as the father; Mickey Rooney, John Carradine, Walter Kingsford and others. This is on the "must" list.

Billy Shea Defeats Don McPhail, 4 and 3, for Middle-Atlantic Links Title

WHITE SOX WIN COMEDY OF ERRORS FROM NATS, 7 TO 6

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1937 15

Putter Best Weapon for G. U. Golfer

McPhail Off Game; Billy Dettweiler, Overton Are Defeated.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Billy Shea, the 18-year-old Georgetown University golfer, who started his golf career on the Congressional links, used that course for his first big-league triumph yesterday as he defeated Don McPhail, 4 and 3, in the final round of the thirty-third Middle Atlantic championship.

The host club ace, who was 6 under par for his first four rounds of the tourney, including his medal-winning 70, lost the cunning he displayed in the early rounds against McPhail, but rallied with his putter as his major weapon and scored the victory on the fifteenth hole, 2 over par for the route and 4 under regulation figures for the event.

McPhail, who used the stymie in his favor in eliminating Dettweiler in the semifinals, was "off the stick" in the final round and after Shea evened the match on the seventh hole he was master of the match for the remainder of the route.

Spencer Overton, the methodical Baltimorean, was the winner's victim in the morning, bowing, 6 and 5, to a raft of birdies and pars, the new champion playing the first nine in 34 strokes, including four 1-under-par holes.

The final-round match that would crown a new champion regardless of who won, as Levi Yoder, the defending title-holder, was eliminated in the first round, found both players below the golf standard they exhibited in the previous matches, but Shea pulled himself together in time to gain the Capital City their second sectional title of the season.

After halving the first hole in a pair of sixes, with each in trouble around the green, Shea assumed a lead on the second by downing a 6-foot putt. The invading finalist squared the match on four with a regulation par as Shea was over in 2, and after halving five in pars, Don went 1-up, for the first and last time, by winning the sixth with a par. A birdie 3 on seven enabled the eventual winner to even it up on seven, and, after halving eight in pars, Shea won the ninth via a fine approach shot as McPhail exploded over the green when his tee shot found the trap.

Trouble on the tenth on his first two shots cost McPhail the hole and a hooked shot by the runner-up on eleven gave Billy a 3-up lead. The next two holes were halved in regulation figures, but Shea chipped close on 14 to gain a dormie 4-up lead, and ended the match on the next as both competitors were on in 2 and down in two putts.

Billy played the finest golf of his life over the week's span, and was a total of 18 up over his four victims, that included Levi Yoder, the 1936 champion, 2 and 1; Martin McCarthy, 6 and 5; Overton, 6 and 5, and McPhail, 4 and 3.

McPhail, one of Baltimore's consistently good golfers, captain of the 1932 Dartmouth golf team, ousted Harry Pitt, Gene Pittman and Dettweiler in his march to the final round.

The morning round match between the finalist and Dettweiler was ended on the last green as McPhail's curling 20-foot putt laid the host club golfer a dead stymie on the first extra hole, after they had played the regulation match in regulation figures, 72 strokes.

The triumph was Shea's second Middle Atlantic title of the year, as the dark-haired Hoya sophomore is the current junior champion of the association.

M. Parker Nolan won the first flight consolation over B. E. Dennell, of Beaver Dam, after winning over Yoder in the morning. Ralph Bogart, Russell Jewell and F. E. Berquist were the other winners in the respective flights, two, three and four.

Buck Allows Only 5 Men to Reach First Base; Chapman Stars.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 25.—The rising Red Sox continued their drive to the top today by beating the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 2, behind the four-hit pitching of Buck Newsom.

It was Boston's third consecutive victory and ninth win in its last ten games.

In chalking up his sixth win of the season and third in a row since he came to the Red Sox two weeks ago from Washington, Newsom allowed only five men to reach first base.

Meanwhile, Boston bunched eight hits off two St. Louis pitchers, Julio Bonetti and Luke Koupal.

Cubs Wallop Dodgers, 11-2, In Slugfest

Tex Carleton Gives Up Only 5 Hits; Galan Raps 2 Homers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 25.—The Cubs caught up with fat Freddy Fitzsimmons and the Dodgers today and clubbed out an 11-to-2 victory over the Brooklyns in a battle of home runs.

Fitzsimmons, who had won two straight since being traded to Brooklyn by the New York Giants, was no match for the Cubs' newly found power hitting and he went out in less than four innings as Augie Galan hit two homers and Rip Collins one to set the scoring pace for the winners.

Hines Leads Tourney; Triple Tie for Second

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 25.—Jimmy Hines, metropolitan open champion from Garden City, Long Island, came to the front of a fast field today in the True Temper golf tourney, carding a second par-shattering round of 36-34—70, for a total of 140, 4 strokes under par at the half-way mark.

Hines overhauled Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., who led the first day with 69 and remained in front until the seventeenth hole. Wiffy ran into a fistful of trouble when his second shot was bunkered. It took a big six and Wiffy went out of first place at 69—72—141.

Big Clarence Clarke, from Bloomfield, N. J., turned in another subpar 71 and stood alone in next place at 71—71—142.

Norfolk, Va., June 25 (AP).—Washington, D. C., netmen predominated play in the Middle Atlantic Tennis tournament today on the Country Club courts here.

Led by Harry Heffner, No. 10 ranking junior player of the country, three racquet wielders from the Nation's Capital advanced into the semifinal round of the junior and boys' divisions.

Heffner disposed of Melvin Rodman, of Baltimore, in easy fashion, 6—1, 6—2, while Dick Williams, of Washington, whipped Kuky Bole, Norfolk boys' titlist, 6—2, 6—4.

In the feature match of the day David Johnsen, of Washington, conquered Bernard Segall, Norfolk junior champion, 6—1, 3—6, 6—4. Jack Mallory, of Norfolk, defeated Baltimore's Philip Burkham, 6—1, 2—6, 6—2.

The other Norfolk lad, Alfred Parker, was overcome by Bosley Baugher, Baltimore boys' champion, 6—2, 6—3. Beacon Parsons, of Washington, won over Dick Nelson, of Baltimore, 6—2, 6—2.

Berger Bothered By Old Injury

His place in centerfield for the Giants in today's game with the Cardinals was taken by Jimmy Ripple.

Dr. Robert F. Hyland, Cardinal club pyhsician, who made an X-ray examination of the injured finger, advised Berger it was not necessary to undergo an immediate operation.

Yankee Wins Over Rainbow In Fast Trial

Newport, R. I., June 25 (AP).—Yankee today defeated Rainbow by 12 minutes 36 seconds, the widest margain of victory to date in the trials to select a defender of the America's cup against the challenge of Tom Sopwith, British sportsman.

In 1934, Yankee, now owned and sailed by Gerard B. Lambert, lost defense nomination in a one second finish to Rainbow, then skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt, but now owned and sailed by Chandler Hovey.

The course was over a 26.3-mile triangle. A 7-mile southeaster ruffling the ocean course at the start and the breeze had swung to south-southwest and was freshening at the close.

Hovey won the start, puting Rainbow over the line half a minute ahead of her opponent, but three-quarters of an hour later Yankee had worked through her lee and taken command.

Yankee completed the first leg of the course, a 9-mile beat, more than 8 minutes ahead of the 1934 defender of the famous trophy.

The second leg furnished a 7.3-mile close reach and Yankee led at the turn by nearly 7 minutes, a reduction in time margin, but probably an increase in distance, for the sloops were moving much faster in the freshening breeze.

Walter Hagen Divorced.

Trenton, N. J., June 25 (AP).—Mrs. Edna C. Hagen, of Deal, N. J., was granted a final decree of divorce today from Walter Hagen, Detroit golf professional. Mrs. Hagen alleged that her husband deserted her while they were in Florida in March, 1926.

Griffs Muff Chances To Put Game on Ice

15,000 Fans See Griffmen Toss Away Opportunities to Score; Wes Ferrell Loses First Game in New Uniform.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's five-game winning streak ended yesterday, which is putting it mildly. But 15,000 muttering, disgruntled fans weren't putting it mildly as they made their way through the Griffith Stadium exits at the finish. They were kneedeep in disgust.

Because they had just seen the Nats toss away a 7-6 ball game to the Chicago White Sox in that ninth inning with a mental brainstorm around third base that jerked the Washington club out of the ball game with great suddenness.

Down upon the ears of Manager Bucky Harris crashed a salvo of boos and there were scattered razzberries, too, for Buddy Myer. With incredulous eyes, the 15,000 had seen Myer make no attempt to score from second base on a clean single to center by Mel Almada, with one run needed to tie the game.

Myer had put that tying run on first base at the start of the inning when Third Baseman Piet muffed his grounder, and he had been sacrified to second by Rick Ferrell. Wes Ferrell drew a walk from Relief Pitcher Clint Brown and the issue then was sqarely up to Almada.

The Mexican met both the issue and the ball with great force. A hot single skipped over second base, bounded into centerfield and 15,000 sigh of relief were heaved against the fences when—horrors!

Myer stopped at third base with that tying run. Down in the dressing room after the game, he excused Manager Harris of all blame. "Harris was waving to Wes Ferrell to stop at second base. I thought he was motioning me to stop at third," said Myer. "We got mixed up, that's all. I'll take the rap."

The bases were still full and only one was out and all, doubtless, would have been forgiven, had Buddy Lewis been able to push that tying run home. But he didn't. Second Baseman Jack Hayes snatched up Lewis' sharp grounder, heaved it to Lucius Appling at second, and Appling rifled it to Bonura at first for a game-ending double play.

It was a cruel defeat for Wes Ferrell, his first in four starts in a Washington uniform. A pair of grievous errors cost Ferrell three runs, including the run in the eighth that gave the Sox their winning margin.

Tempers were short and fists were cocked out there on the diamond again yesterday as the Nats and Sox waged their bitter battle. Big Cal Hubbard, the 280-pound umpire, twice was forced to insert his bulky self between belligerent athletes to avert a battle on the baselines.

Third Baseman Tony Piet, of the Sox, whose slam-bang base-running tactics put Catcher Cliff Bolton out of the game for a month last season, all but precipitated a fight in the eighth when he crashed into Johnny Mihalic as the little infielder was covering first base and knocked him flat, causing Mihalic to drop the ball.

Manager Bucky Harris stormed over from the third base coaching lines and exchanged hot words with Piet, as Mihalic lay in the dirt, rubbing his head. Nats and White Sox rushed from the dugouts and big Hubbard thrust himself between Harris and Piet. Dark looks were a dime a dozen out there around the bag. Ultimately, the scene calmed and they resumed their baseball.

But in the ninth, Buddy Myer crashed into Shortstop Appling with such force at second base, and spikes showing, that the giant Hubbard again dashed to the scene. While he restrained Myer, Umpire Ormsby thrust himself in front of Appling and was pushed around for his pains by the Sox shortstop.

The Nats scored in all of the first four innings, but they never could catch up with the White Sox, who were wresting some cheap runs out of Ferrell, which caused the big right-hander to pitch his glove in disgust at the end of the fourth inning.

They reached Ferrell for three runs in the opening inning, only one of 'em earned. Cecil Travis threw a tame grounder off Radcliff's bat into the Washington dugout and then Mike Kreevich banged a home run into the leftfield seats. Bonura and Appling prodded the third run around with a pair of singles.

Washington got a run back off Whitehead in that first inning when Sington's single drove in Lewis and they cut the Sox lead to 3-2 in the second when Almada tripled to left to score Rick Ferrel. But the Sox made it 4-2 in the third when Bonura and Appling singled. And the Nats made it 4-3 in their half of the inning when Kuhel beat out a bunt and Stone contributed a single.

That's the way it went. The Sox upped their lead to 6 to 3 in the fourth with the aid of Whitehead's looping single to center, and the Nats matched those two runs with two of their own after Bonura dropped a throw at first base. They batted Whitehead out of the box, and Relief Pitcher Merritt Cain forced one run across. The other was a cheap affair, scored on Stone's pop, which Appling lost in the sun.

The game rocked along at 6 to 5 until the eighth, when Hayes whacked a single to center and dashed all the way to third on Piet's attempted sacrifice. Until he crashed into Mihalic, Piet was out on the play, but when the little infielder dropped the ball, Hayes took an extra base, which enabled him to score while Myer was turning She's grounder into a force play.

That 7-to-5 lead of the Sox dwindled to 7 to 6 in the eighth, when Lewis and Kuhel led off with singles that drove Cain from the box. Stone hit into a force play to score Lewis from third, but with the tying run on base Sington and Travis were no help to the Nats.

Harvard Varsity Wins 75th Regatta From Yale Oarsmen

Chace Puts Crimson in Front Early

Wins Race by Length; Eli's Take Jayvee, Freshmen Events.

By the Associated Press.

New London, Conn., June 25.—Harvard's crack varsity crew, stroked by Jim (Spike) Chace, defeated Yale by one length tonight in the climax 4-mile event of the seventy-fifth annual regatta between the two schools.

The Crimson, taking the lead in the first mile after spotting Yale an early advantage, hung on to the end in a grueling finish. Yale, at one time trailing by nearly two lengths, had made up all but about a quarter length as they hit the last quarter of a mile. Here, however, Harvard's finishing spurt proved far superior and the Crimson won going away.

Harvard's varsity triumph came after the Crimson had suffered defeats in both the freshman and junior varsity 2-mile races this morning. It was Harvard's second varsity victory in a row over Yale and the Crimson's thirty-sixth in the long series that began in 1852. Yale has won 39 races.

This, of course, was Harvard's big objective and the way Chace and his mates came through furnished a brilliant finish to the Crimson oarsmen's first season under the coaching guidance of Tom Bolles, former University of Washington freshman mentor.

The Crimson oarsmen finishd the 4-mile upstream grind from the railroad bridge to Bartlett's cove in fine shape, but Yale appeared exhausted. Unofficial clockings on the race caught Harvard in slightly over 20 minutes. The upstream record of 20:14 2-5 was set in 1926 by Yale.

Harvard, 2:25 4-5, 4:56 1-5, 7:28 4-5, 10:03 3-5, 12:31 2-5, 15:02, 17:30 2-5, 20:02.

Yale, 2:24 1-5, 4:58 2-5, 7:32 1-5, 10:07 3-5, 12:36 4-5, 15:06 2-5, 17:33, 20:06 2-5.

Summaries of the two preliminary races: :

All-Army Net Play Reaches Finals Today

Muehleisen and Robinson Will Meet at Army-Navy Club for Title.

Lieut. Dolph Meuhleisen, defending champion, who traveled all the way from March Field, Calif., to defend his tennis crown against members of the Army who come from posts all over the country, advanced into the final round of the all-Army tournament yesterday with a straight-set victory over Lieut. William Robertson, 6—0, 6—1, 6—2.

Opposing the former flying cadet will be Lieut. Stanley Robinson, seeded No. 2, who climbed into the final round by virtue of a lengthy victory over Capt. James Andrew, unseeded, who was making a desperate bid for the title before falling before Robinson, 8—6, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

They will play for the eleventh all-Army championship at 2 p. m. today on the Army-Navy Country Club courts.

Muehleisen romped past Robertson in his semifinal match, even though Robertson was playing a steady game. Muelheisen kept the pressure on throughout the match to win.

Capt. James Andrew, who sprung two major upsets in the tournament, eliminating Capt. Merritt, seeded No. 6, and Lieut. O'Connell, seeded No. 3, finally was subdued when he ran into the tournament's No. 2 man. The match was featured by reluctance of either participant to take chances or yield on his offense.

Capt. Drake and Staff Sergt. Lapsley defeated Capt. Quesada and Cadet Newcomer, 6—4, 6—2, in a quarter-final match.

Capt. Merritt and Capt. Rothschild defeated Maj. Christenberry and Lieut. Wade, 6—4, 10—8, and Lieut. Stone and Lieut. Morrill defeated Col. Dean and Lieut. Schull, 8—2, 7—5, in second-round matches.

In quarter-final matches scheduled for today, Capt. Andrew and Lieut. O'Connell meet Capt. Merritt and Capt. Rothschild, while Lieut. Robinson and Lieut. Bell play Lieut. Stone and Lieut. Morrill.

Army Polo Fours Play Round Robin

A round robin game between three of the Army teams featured the weekly Wednesday polo show yesterday on the West Potomac Park Field. Three games of three period each were played, with the Cavalry emerging with two wins. The Blues won and lost, while the Whites dropped their two starts.

In the first game the Cavalry, led by Capt. Trapnell, eked out a 3-2 win over the Blues in their first match, and then downed the Whites, 8-2, as Capt. Trapnell again led the way with two goals. He was aided in the second game by Capt. P. G. Smith, who also scored twice.

After the Blues had bowed to the Cavalry four, they promptly downed the Whites, 3-1, the scoring being handled by Lieut. Iseley, Capt. Hank Reed and Maj. Martin.

Dick Siebert Released.

St. Louis, June 25 (AP).—In order to make room on the club roster for a new pitcher, Southpaw Abe White, the St. Louis Cardinals released First Baseman Dick Siebert to Columbus on option.

Grant Takes Wimbledon Net Feature

Atlantan Scores Despite Ankle Injury; Four U. S. Men Advance.

Wimbledon, England, June 25 (AP).—Although Bryan (Bitsy) Grant "fought, bled" and almost died before he saved his tennis scalp on Wimbledon's classic turf today, the ranks of America's Davis Cup forces remained unbroken through another day's session of the all-England championships.

Grant, hobbling about on an injured ankle that added to the troubles besetting the Georgia gamecock since he arrived here, scored a remarkable five-set victory over New Zealand's Alan Stedman after losing the first two sets.

The scores were 4—6, 6—8, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3, as the intrepid little Southerner joined Don Budge and Frankie Parker in reaching the quarter-finals of the men's singles.

Stays on Defense.

Grant played purely defensive tennis, never doing more than enough to get the ball back and let the New Zealander finally beat himself. "Bitsy" scored only one placement in each of the last three sets, which probably is a record for top-flight tennis.

Budge meantime kept intact his record of not having dropped a set thus far in his campaign abroad, but the American ace had to pull out all the stops before he subdued Ladislow Hecht, the Czechoslovakian Davis Cup player, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

Hecht demonstrated that if there's any weakness in Budge's armor it's his forehand, a fact that usually passes unnoticed because of the all-around violence of the American's game.

Budge held command of the match, however, from start to finish and may have just been taking things easy since he had a doubles engagement later. Paired with Gene Mako, Don defeated the Swiss team of H. C. Fisher and B. Maneff, 6—1, 6—1, 6—3. It was a second-round contest.

Straight Sets.

Parker scored a straight-set victory over Daniel Prenn, "the man without a country," 6—4, 7—5, 6—2, but had seemed headed for trouble when the German expatriate led by 5-0 in the second set.

Budge's next opponent will be Vivian McGrath, Australian champion, who seems to have recovered from the illness which handicapped him this spring. Mako is likely to pass out of the singles tomorrow at the hands of Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Germany's ace and the tournament's No. 2 "seeded" entry.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York and Stamford, Conn., advanced to the fourth round of the women's singles by downing Miss F. S. Ford, England, 6—4, 6—1. The American girl paired with the veteran Frenchman, Jacques Brugnon, to beat Miss C. M. Burrows and J. B. Harrison, England, in the mixed doubles, 6—2, 6—3.

Katherine Winthrop, Boston girl, was eliminated in the third round by England's talented Kay Stammers, 6—3, 6—3.

$10,000 Race Opens Newest Track Today

Delaware Park to Lure Best Stables, Society for Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., June 25.—Presenting one of the country's most modern race tracks, Delaware Park brings the thoroughbreds to a horse-loving community tomorrow when it opens a 25-day meeting with 10 3-year-olds named for the $10,000 Kent Handicap.

With the possible exception of John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, none of the high-class 3-year-olds are scheduled to appear for the Inaugural Stake. Nevertheless, upward of 15,000 fans, including a cross-section of Eastern society, are expected to jam the compact track built on the outskirts of this city at the cost of $750,000 by William duPont, jr., and associates.

Supporting the Kent will be seven other races, including the 6 furlongs of the Wilmington Handicap for which Mrs. Walter O'Hara's Mucho Gusto and Mrs. Marian Cassidy's Bill Farnsworth have been named.

Heading the field in the 11-16 miles of the Kent are Flying Scot, third in the Preakness, but a failure in the Latonia Derby, and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin's Strabo, victorious over Sceneshifter in the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct last week. The latter has been asked to carry top weight of 122 pounds, 4 more than has been assigned Strabo.

Inside the flat track are two steeplechase courses. There will be no races over the jumps this year, however, since the turf is not in condition.

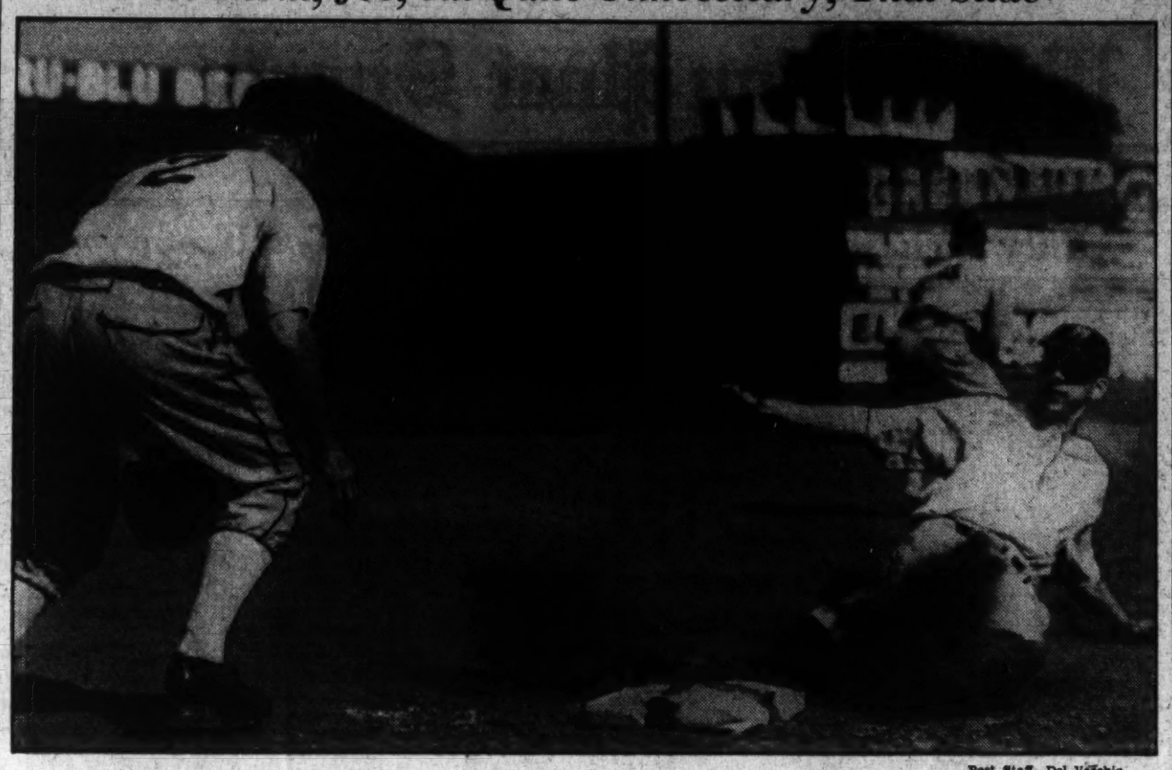
Yale Nine Wins Over Harvard, 13-3

New London, Conn., June 25 (AP).—The Yale baseball team trounced Harvard, 13 to 3 today, winning the deciding contest of a three-game series as Larry Kelley sparkled in a fitting farewell to his Yale sports career.

The colorful athlete, making his final appearance in an Eli uniform, received an ovation from the capacity crowd of 2,500 as he came to bat, the second man up in the ninth.

He responded in Kellian style by clouting the first ball pitched him to the center field wall for a double. He scampered to third on a wild pitch and scored Yale's thirteenth run on a single by Eddie Collins.

Nice Form, Joe, but Quite Unnecessary, That Slide



Post Staff—Del Vecchio.

Joe Kuhel skids into third base with a perfect slide in the third inning after dashing from first on Stone's single to center, but the play wasn't even close. Third Baseman Piet is seen waiting for the throw which Shortstop Appling is intercepting.

Mitchell, Garnett Reach Net Finals

Dooley Mitchell and Yelverton Garnett, seeded one and two, advanced to the finals of the men's singles of the Grand National tennis tournament yesterday at Edgemoor in two of the finest matches ever witnessed in this vicinity.

Mitchell arose from the dregs of defeat to whip the third-ranking Hugh Lynch, 2—6, 4—6, 9—7, 6—3, 7—5, in the most dramatic battle ever staged at the club. Mitchell, after dropping the first two sets, and with Lynch at set point four times in the third, rallied in incredible fashion, finally capitalizing on Lynch's weak back-hand and outlasted him. Hugh was at match point twice in the final set.

Buddy Goeltz, No. 1 foreign player, bowed to an exhibition of tennis on Garnett's part that was nothing short of sensational. Garnett, playing like a professional with every stroke functioning perfectly, actually toyed with the WilkesBarre ace, winning 6—1, 6—3, 6—3.

Mitchell and Garnett meet at 3 p. m. today in the finals. The semi-finals of the men's doubles between Muhleisen and Lynch and Goeltz and Adair is at 10:30 this morning.

Cincinnati, June 25.—Cincinnati's Reds, specializing in extra-base blows, batted out a 6-to-2 victory over the Boston Bees today to register their sixth win in the nine games that the veteran Chick Hafey has patrolled centerfield as a regular.

Eight of the ten hits the Reds gathered off three Boston pitchers went for extra bases. Triples by Goodman and Kampouris, a walk and doubles by Hafey and Riggs sewed the game up for Cincinnati with four runs in the first inning.

$38,000 Futurity Helps Close Washington Park Spring Races

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—Washington Park's summer race meeting closes tomorrow with the running of the richest 2-year-old stake of the year to date, the Washington Park Futurity, which will have a gross value of $38,730, provided all eight named in the overnight field go to the post.

The thoroughbreds start galloping at Arlington Park Monday for a 30-day meeting for purses totaling $400,000, making it the richest of the American summer season.

The Washington Park Futurity at 6 furlongs will have a distinct Western flavor, as no Eastern owner was willing to risk a $1,000 starting fee. At least the race will temporarily clear up the 2-year-old title for all the juvenile stars uncovered thus far this season.

The juveniles of Mrs. Ethel W. Mars, Chicago, owner of the famed Milky Way Farm Stable, and those of Hal Price Headley, Lexington (Ky.) turfman, probably will go to the post favorites. However, there also will be backing for the thoroughbreds from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm and Emerson F. Woodward's Valdina Farm, a powerful Texas stable.

The Futurity field, with post positions follows:

Ruffing Holds Detroiters to Six Hits; Mates Chase Bridges.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—The Yankees took a four-game lead on the American League pack today by walloping the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 1, behind the six-hit pitching of Charley (The Red) Ruffing in the opening game of their important series.

They sewed up the game in the first inning, when Bill Dickey's sixth homer in five days drove in three runs off Tommy Bridges. The only Tiger run off Ruffing, who fanned four, was produced by Charley Gehringer's homer with the bases empty in the fourth. The win was Ruffing's seventh against two setbacks.

Charles Town Purse Captured by Nay Nay

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25.—Nay Nay, worth every ounce of oats that she consumes, ran one of her best races this afternoon to win the unnamed event that occupied the feature position on today's program of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc. Answering the urging of Jockey R. Root, who seems on the way to dethrone Sammy Palumbo as the champion rider hereabouts, Nay Nay galloped to the imaginary wire three lengths in advance of Adriatic. Lady Buck, one that was away slowly, came from far back to be third in the field of eight operating over the 4½-furlong course.

It was in the role of a $5.80 favorite that Nay Nay, owned by E. Johnston, did her stuff so effectively. Her time of 50 3-5 was a second off the track record for the distance.

Johnny Bane was first out of the gates, but had hardly gone 20 yards before Nay Nay shot up on the inside to contest for the lead. The two ran as a pair to the turn, and then Nay Nay gradually drew away. This took all the run out of Johnny Bane and he drifted back through the field as Adriatic and Lady Buck moved up. However, Root pumped a little harder on Nay Nay and she drew out approaching the wire.

Those of the crowd of 4,000 who participated in the daily double formed a pool that resulted in a pay-off of $47.60 on the combination of Cats Cradle and Mazyniata.

The day brought the suspensions of two jockeys. L. Machado and M. Berg were the accused. The former was reprimanded for rough riding in the fifth race, while the latter was set down for crossing over too sharply in the third race. Both suspensions were for five days.

The final race saw Lady Beacon beat seven others, to pay $12.80. Colorist, heavily backed choice, was second, beaten two lengths, with Maple Barbara third.

With Herbie Lauch in the saddle, Justa Canter scored a surprisingly easy victory in the first race, leading a field of six others to the wire after a four-and-a-half furlong test. Justa Canter had a margin of five lengths over Miss Patches with Lady's Favor third. The winner was overlooked in the heavy wagering and paid a $23.60 mutuel.

Cats Cradle, a first-time starter, pounced out of the maiden ranks under a hustling ride by Jockey R. Root. The daughter of Catalan was given a stiff battle from the start by Miss Bones, one that finished second, ahead of Croix de Tour. The winner, owned by E. Johnston, paid a $12.60 mutuel.

Mazyniata, with Palumbo aboard, downed, among others, Miss Symphony and Crossing Over in the third race. The daughter of Mayne, owned by A. H. Utterback, was a $5 favorite.

Red Lights in Trade Highway Seen by Ayres

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 25.—The worst enemy of banking in this country has always been the business cycle, Leonard P. Ayres, vice president, Cleveland Trust Co., Cleveland, Ohio, and chairman economic policy commission of the American Bankers Association, told a general meeting of the Graduate School of Banking here tonight. The school is conducted jointly by the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University, and is attended by about 600 bank executives from all parts of the United States.

"Bankers have always made loans in periods of prosperity that turned out to be in greater or less degree uncollectable in the following periods of depression," Col. Ayres said. "When the depressions were mild and brief the resulting banking troubles did not prove serious, but when they were severe the banks suffered greatly." He said that with almost clocklike regularity banking has been hard hit in business depressions at intervals of about 20 years ever since this country has been in existence.

Four Warnings.

Discussing present business prospects, Col. Ayres pointed out that every depression which was serious enough to cause important banking difficulties during the past 100 years furnished four clear warnings, which are now apparent, of its advent long before the crisis came.

"When business is prosperous and bond prices turn down and continue to decline," he said, "and then stock prices turn down and keep on declining, it is clearly time for the banker to become unusually cautious. When interest rates stiffen from month to month in a period of prosperity, while bond and stock prices are declining, the banker should be aware that trouble may be brewing. Wholesale prices always advance during periods of prosperity and then shortly before the following depressions develop they turn downward.

"The most important fact about these warning signals that foretold the advents of all our serious depressions is that they have all four been operative before every one of the depressions. There are no exceptions. When they all give warnings together during an advanced period of business prosperity they constitute in combination a dependable and unfailing sign that trouble which may prove serious to bankers is about to develop."

Brokers' Association Frowns on Holidays

New York, June 25 (AP).—There are too many holidays for Wall Street in the opinion of the board of governors of the association of stock exchange members firms. In a letter to the New York Stock Exchange, today, signed by E. A. Pierce, of E. A. Pierce & Co., president of the association, it was urged that the exchange remain open on Saturdays during July and August and opposed its closing on any day the banks were open.

At the offices of the association it was stated this action was taken to forestall possible closing of the exchange on the Saturday before the Fourth of July and also to combat the move for Saturday closings during the summer.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Work Irregularly Lower in Dull Trading; Wheat Prices Jump.

New York, June 26.—Stocks made an attempt at advancing and gave up. They closed with the majority of prices lower, the first setback in a week, on a sales volume of around half a million shares. Government bond prices were shaded. Francs felt the full force of escaping French capital, which bore down on futures quotations, but the control funds held spot exchange steady. Grains provided higher prices on Canadian drought news. September wheat climbed 3 cents to 116⅞ cents a bushel.

In stocks the railroads were the poorest performers. They probably are suffering from the cumulative effect of a series of reports showing that the rise in net income for the last two years has come to a halt. Freight traffic continues to run ahead of a year ago, but further increases are needed to give many roads sufficient income to meet fixed charges, to say nothing about profits for the shares. On top of that are the threats of higher wages and the certainty of higher taxes. Many a railroad market worry would disappear with a brisk gain in general business, but that is one of the major uncertainties of the scene. Some of the railroad stocks dipped a fraction to more than two points. Santa Fe and Southern Pacific were conspicuous.

Steel moved above par and then fell back a point. Some of the independent steels were firmer on what the market fancied was a favorable turn in the strikes. Copper stocks lost their recent firmness. Some of the metals were the heaviest losers, in spite of the warlike tone to the foreign news. Electrics also had a slight setback. New low prices were paid for National Dairy and Borden. Starrett and Superheaten gave up 2 to 4 points. Cluett, Case preferred and Bush Terminal preferred weakened.

Some Strong Spots.

On the stronger side, Warren Pipe rose on a dividend increase. Wayne Pump, Coca Cola, National Supply, Household Finance preferred, Life Savers and Wheeling Steel hardened. Western Union was steady. Most of the oil shares moved up. Pure Oil was a favorite.

The highlight of the day in the international financial news was the decision of the British government to increase its exchange equalization account, by which it controls the violence of the swings in sterling by £200,000,000 to £575,000,000. Several logical explanations were deduced from the announcement. One was that the fund was well gorged with gold, despite recent heavy sales to the Bank of England, and that the government wanted more sterling resources to cover future gold purchases without having a margin so slim as to force possible future action in a crisis atmosphere.

Since the Bank of England's note circulation will reach a peak at the August bank holiday, if precedent be followed, there will not be then much point for the bank to make further purchase of metal from the equalization account. It is interesting to note that the position of the British exchange account is almost the reverse of the smaller French fund. The British account is short of sterling and gorged with gold assets; the French fund has plenty of franc resources but is barren of gold ones.

Gold Market.

The gold market took a bit of encouragement from the British decision to increase the control fund, for its was argued that the British intended to buy much more gold and that, therefore, there was less immediate risk of a cut in the world price. It was believed that this might induce less active unloading of hoarded gold and thereby relieve the pressure upon the British, American and Dutch control bodies.

On the home front the backwash of the income tax date financial operations have given a moderate inflationary turn to affairs. The rise of $48,000,000 in brokers' loans reported last night by the Federal Reserve Board probably was connected with new bond offerings. Treasury spending, and a drop in currency circulation helped to lift excess reserves by $60,000,000. The gold flow was undiminished, $50,000,000 being added to our already swollen stocks.

Among New York City banks there was a drop in holdings of Government securities. Meanwhile, foreign bank deposits continued to rise. The increase has been steady for several weeks. It accounts for the lowering this week of the bankers' bill rate and probably has been a factor in holding up stock prices. In that connection the British control fund's request for more money strengthened the feeling here that the gold price scare had gone for a long time. Brokers reported some increase in foreign purchases of stocks.

Bank Reserves.

The bulk of the $57,000,000 increase in "nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts," which prevented bank reserves from rising as much as they might have otherwise, was produced by another one of those certified or cashier check transactions by which banks keep the proceeds of a new issue in the form of cash without allowing it to become a part of deposits upon which they have to pay deposit insurance premiums. Undoubtedly the explanation of the item lies in the New York State financing, the proceeds of which were turned into certified or cashiers' checks and held awaiting use next week, when the State has a debt maturity.

Odd Lots.

A great saving in taxpayers' money could be made through elimination of personal publicity under the guise of dissemination of information on various Government activities. Not only does such expenditure take place on the grand scale with the Federal Government, but many States also indulge in the expense for the enhancement of political ambition. In Louisiana, for instance, a few statistics on Federal income-tax collections, sent around today, are used as a base for building up the glories of a "three-point" program of the reigning Governor . . . another good trick . . . "who was quoted as frowning" by a Washington correspondent who probably has been seeing too many dreams walking through the New Deal.

Street Talk.

No wonder the railroads are feeling the pinch of competition. A letter by air mail was received this morning from the publicity man attached to the president's office of one of the largest Western railroads. A prominent Eastern railroads. A prominent Eastern railmitted he drove his motor car to the West Coast and back . . . Another little glimpse of the obvious in a newspaper headline: "Paris Expects Franc to Be Set at Lowest Level" . . . Another: The observation of a public speaker that "the worst enemy of banking in this country has always been the business cycle." In other words, no business troubles, no banking worries.

Steel.

In some quarters where trading in steel can be stirred up now and then talk of better times is heard. Optimism is based on three counts: (1) the fact that Steel's second quarter earnings, to be published late next month, have been exceptionally good, amounting to around $5 a share; (2) the fact that the strikes have not hurt Steel any, but perhaps have turned some business that way, and (3) the fact that as the optimists hope, the strikes are collapsing, and settlement will be followed by a revival in general steel buying.

Over Counter.

In most respects the new rules governing over-the-counter trading, proposed by the S. E. C. were much the same as those in the old investment bankers' code. They brought no surprise and the general comment was that they would prove to be workable and would do some good, although the procedure under them will vary little from that already voluntarily in effect in most houses.

Railroad Earnings.

More railroad reports for May are being published. The first score show combined net operating income nearly 11 per cent under that for the same month of last year, although gross revenues have risen 10 per cent. Either the railroads have reached the point at which rising costs have overtaken their efforts at economical operation, or they recently have been spending more on maintenance than was strictly necessary. In any event, it is apparent that larger revenues will be necessary to make railroads as a whole profitable, even though no further rise in wages or other costs take place.

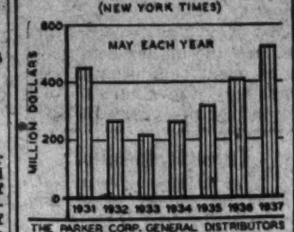
Dividend Payments Set Record for May



Boston, Mass., June 25.—Dividend payments continue at a high rate. Declarations in May were the largest for any month this year and also the largest for any May on record, surpassing a year ago by 27 per cent. Curb Is Lower In Light Trading

New York, June 25 (AP).—Most groups worked lower in a quiet curb market today. Oils were consistent losers in spite of the fact the heavy gasoline consuming season is here. Creole Petroleum slid off ⅝ to close at 37. Gulf Oil finished at 52¼, off ¼, and Sunray Oil, Pantepec and Leonard Oil were fractionally lower.

Utilities were mixed. American Gas & Electric gained ⅛ to close at 31½, while United Gas ended at 8¾, down ⅜. American Light & Traction and American Superpower edged down a bit. Aluminum Co. broke 2 points to finish at 140. Lake Shore Mines, Newmont Mining and Pioneer Gold did a little better. Tilting backward were Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., American Cyanamid "B," Pan American Airways and Technicolor.

Steel Business Slackens With Labor Warfare

Uncertainty of Future Reduces Volume of New Orders.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—The volume of new steel business continues to decline, even in quarters of the industry not affected by strikes, says Iron Age in its weekly survey. The trend was ascribed in part to seasonal factors and in part to "loss of confidence occasioned by the labor agitation."

"With the closing down of the Johnstown plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation by order of Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania," said the review, "and the postponement of the scheduled reopening of the Youngstown plants of Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., when martial law was declared in Mahoning Valley by Gov. Davey of Ohio, the amount of steel ingot production capacity that has been rendered idle by strikes is nearly 11,000,000 tons on an annual basis, or about 16 per cent of the country's total capacity. In addition, 90,000 steel workers are idle and total pay roll losses to date are about $15,000,000.

Fifth Week of Strikes.

"As the strikes enter their fifth week, and with hopes for a mutually satisfactory settlement as remote as ever, the volume of steel business being switched to companies not affected by strikes appears to be growing in volume, though it is not even now of large proportions, which is one indication that requirements of consumers, with some exceptions, are lessening.

"Other developments pointing to a downturn in consumers' needs are requests for holding up shipments or extension of delivery dates beyond the time originally specified. The decline in new orders and reduction in backlogs find reflection in lowered operations at some plants where labor troubles are not a factor. The average for the country this week is estimated at 75 per cent, down 2 points from last week."
